LATEST NEWS FROM THE ARMY.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Nov. 11.

Accounts from Manassas Junction to-day say that the railroad is in good order from Catlett's to Warrenton Junction, including the Cedar River bridge, and all the way up to Rappahannock Station.

Contrabands coming into our lines at Rappahannock Station, report Longstreet in command of the rebel forces at Culpepper, and that Gen. Lee, who commands the whole army, also has his headquarters there.

They say that Gen. A. P. Hill's force continues with Jackson somewhere in the Valley, and that Longstreet's forces and others at Culpepper were thrown there to prevent the Union army from getting between the main body of the rebel army and Richmond.

On Saturday last, they add, Jackson was not moving toward Culpepper.

Scouts from Ashby's Gap and Snicker's Gap yesterday received the enemy's pickets at both, and a Union lady, sent to our lines under a flag of truce, says that Gen. Hill's forces were five days before lying on the other side of the Gap.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Nov. 11—P. M.

A correspondent of the Associated Press at headquarters of the Army of the Potomac reports that a small force of the enemy's cavalry made their appearance, yesterday morning, at Salem, which is 13 miles from Warrenton. They were hovering in the rear of our army, evidently watching our movements, and to cut off the transportation of supplies.

The information received respecting the rebel army, shows that A. P. and D. H. Hill's commands were concentrated in and around Culpepper Court-house, yesterday; that Longstreet occupies the bottom Culpepper and Gordonsville, while Jackson holds Chester and Manassas Gap.

There was heavy firing in the front yesterday, between Pleasanton and Stuart, but the result was of no importance.

Gen. Bayard still remains at Rappahannock Station, with the enemy in force on the opposite side of the river.

The troops are in a comfortable and healthy condition, being well clothed and having ample supplies of food.

GEN. M'CLELLAN'S DEPARTURE.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Nov. 11.

Maj-Gen. McCLELLAN and personal Staff left Warrenton at 11 o'clock to-day. On reaching Warrenton Junction a salute was fired. The troops, which had been drawn up in line, afterward broke ranks, when the soldiers crowded round him, and many eagerly called for a few parting words. He said, in response, while on the platform of the railroad depot:

"I wish you to stand by BURNSIDE as you have stood by me, and all will be well. Good bye."

To this there was a spontaneous and enthusiastic response. The troops were also drawn up in line at Bristow Station and Manassas Junction, where similar scenes took place, and where McCLELLAN was complimented with enthusiastic cheers.

The party arrived here this afternoon, just in time to take the 5 o'clock train of cars for Trenton. The cars being detained, owing to some impediment on the track, Gen. McCLELLAN was recognized by the many soldiers quartered in that vicinity, when he was greeted with oft-repeated cheers.

GEN. M'CLELLAN'S FAREWELL ORDER.

The following Farewell Order was read to the forces composing the Army of the Potomac, yesterday morning, on dress parade:

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, CAMP NEAR RECTORTOWN, VA., Nov. 7, 1862.

Officers and Soldiers of the Army of the Potomac:

An order of the President deprives upon Major-Gen. BURNSIDE, the command of this army. In parting from you, I cannot express the love and gratitude I have to you. As an army you have grown up under my care. In you I have never found doubt or coldness. The battles you have fought under my command will probably live in our nation's history. The glory you have achieved; our marches; perils and dangers; the graves of our comrades fallen in battle and by disease; the broken forms of those whom wounds and sickness have disabled; the strongest associations which exist among men, unite us still by an indissoluble tie. We shall ever be comrades in supporting the Constitution of our country and the nationality of its people.

GEORGE B. McCLELLAN,
Major-General United States Army.

LATEST REPORTS FROM HEADQUARTERS.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Tuesday, Nov. 11.

Gen. McCLELLAN was escorted to the cars this morn, by a large cavalcade of officers, including Gen. BURNSIDE. There was no demonstration on his departure.

Gen. AUGUR, recently appointed to a division command in the Second Army Corps, has been ordered to report to Gen. BANKS, and left to-day.

The 6th New-York Cavalry, (Ira Harris Guards,) went, yesterday, on a reconnoissance toward the Blue Ridge.

CONGRATULATIONS TO GEN. BURNSIDE.

TELEGRAPHIC CORRESPONDENCE WITH GOVERNOR SPRAGUE.

STATE OF RHODE ISLAND, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT. PROVIDENCE, Nov. 10, 1862.

GENERAL: Allow me to tender you my sincere congratulations on your appointment to the command of the Army of the Potomac. Your well-known energy, skill and patriotism, will, I feel sure, restore confidence to a disheartened people, and lead them to expect active operations and the speedy success of our brave army in the suppression of treason and rebellion.

Rhode Island regards your appointment with enlarged pride and pleasure.

(Signed,) WM. SPRAGUE.

To Gen. BURNSIDE, Commander-in-Chief, Army of the Potomac.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY, Nov. 10, 1862.

To Gov. Wm. Sprague:

Your dispatch of this date is received, and I thank you for it. It is a great support to me in the assumption of so great a responsibility to know that I have your confidence and that of the State of Rhode Island.

(Signed) A. E. BURNSIDE,
Major-General, Commanding Army of the Potomac.

OUR SPECIAL ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

How the Army Received the News of Gen. McClellan's Removal.

LETTER FROM RECTORTOWN.

RECTORTOWN, FAUQUIER COUNTY, VA., THIRTY-EIGHT MILES FROM THE POTOMAC, Saturday, Nov. 8, 1862.

At 11 o'clock last night came the order for removing Gen. McCLELLAN, and substituting Gen. BURNSIDE in his place. The announcement this morning, of course, occasions the most intense excitement among the troops. But we hear nothing of those one hundred thousand who were to lay down their arms. On the contrary, the news is received among the soldiers as the harbinger of victory. To see the effect, I made known the fact to a number of them collected at the depôt this morning. "That's good news!" exclaimed one. "I am mighty glad to hear that," said another. "This war will soon be ended," chimed in a third. There was not, indeed, a dissenting voice among the whole number as to the propriety and necessity for such a change. The General's Staff is, of course, uproarious, venting their spleen against the President, Gen. HALLECK, and mankind in general. Gen. McCLELLAN was very unfortunate in selecting his staff of officers. There were exceptions, to be sure, but, as a whole, there has been no body of men so universally unpopular in the army. Pretentious, overbearing, it has been almost impossible to penetrate through them to their General. His headquarters were at this place until to-day. Early this morning he and Gen. BURNSIDE rode over together to Salem, a small village five miles distant on the Manassas Railroad. Gen. SYKES' Brigade, which guards the rear of the army, passed through here to-day, from the direction of Snicker's Gap. Gen. SYKES, who is of the Regular army, and brave as he is affable and cautious, was promoted recently from the Colonelcy of the First Minnesota, for distinguished bravery in the battles of the Peninsula. He has been quartered for the past few days at the residence of a daughter of Gen. ARMISTEAD, an old officer of the Regular army. Snicker's and Ashby's Gaps have both been given up, as our forces have continued on their onward march. The appearance of a few rebel cavalry through the latter, day before yesterday, occasioned considerable of a panic among the teamsters. A hundred rumors were soon afloat to the effect that Harper's Ferry had been taken, our wagon trains captured, &c., &c. The First New-Jersey Cavalry started on a scouting expedition on Wednesday; proceeding up through the valley we here passed through and captured six of WARR'S guerrillas, which were discovered in the vicinity of Short Mountain. Large numbers of convalescents and stragglers are scattered all along the various roads from the Potomac. Some fifteen hundred exchanged prisoners are also on their way from the Ferry. The Manassas Gap Railroad is now to be the base of our supplies. Several trains ran up yesterday from the Junction with forage and supplies. Our advance is now at Sulphur Springs, a few miles beyond Warrenton. A fight has been expected at Waterloo, and heavy firing has been heard in that direction to-day. All the troops in the vicinity of Salem and Piedmont are being rapidly pushed forward. I have found many Union people on the march. One—a large slaveholder—told me that he considered the President's Proclamation the most effective war measure which had yet been adopted. The quicker it was put into effect the better. Large numbers of the negroes are following in the wake of the army, "striking out for the North," as they express. Miss BUCKNER, the quinine operator, who has just been released, lives a short distance from here. An order was promulgated from headquarters, Thursday morning, ordering that all officers guilty of permitting their men to pillage and rob the people, shall be punished with death. Notwithstanding the stringency of the measure, however, the men continue to indulge freely in their stealing propensities.

A furious snow-storm raged all day yesterday, and the weather to-day is cold and cheerless. J.

LETTERS FROM WARRENTON.

WARRENTON, Va., Sunday, Nov. 9, 1862.

Major-Gens. McCLELLAN and BURNSIDE reached here at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and took quarters at the Warren Green House. It was soon noised about that Gen. McCLELLAN had been relieved of his command, and ordered to report to Trenton, N. J. As such an order would be slightly Premonitory, the rumor was not generally credited, until an officer stated that he had it from one of Gen. McCLELLAN'S Staff. The confirmation was soon known, and, as well may be expected, it was the only subject talked of by the large group of officers on the piazza and about the front of the hotel for some time. All were taken by surprise, and all desired to know the immediate cause of the order, but no one appeared who could gratify them so far as to give the desired information, and everything was left to conjecture.

A few insisted upon it that the "Radicals"—a phantasmagoria that seems to haunt the brains of almost all admirers of the institution of Slavery—had got the President by the nose again, and were using him to carry out their darling projects against the peculiar institution, known as African Slavery; others "guessed" that it was because Gen. McCLELLAN failed to prevent the rebel army from falling back to Gordonsville and Richmond. Still there was another class who believed that the retiring General was to be restored to his old position as Commander-in-Chief of all the forces in the field, and that Gen. HALLECK was to be put into camp again.

Many expressed their regrets at the issuing of such an order just at this time, and a few reckless individuals, under the excitement of the moment, threatened to resign their commissions forthwith—as if they were serving Generals and not a country. But they will not resign, although some of them, possibly, could be well spared from the service. A certain class of officers, who look at everything from a political stand-point, predicted that it would make Gen. McCLELLAN the next Democratic President of the United States. The subject was soon exhausted, and the officers, who had nothing better to do, canvassed the qualifications of the new incumbent, Gen. BURNSIDE. The opinions were as various as the prejudices of the individuals who expressed them, but a majority of officers think that the choice of the President is a good one.

EXTRA BILLY SMITH.

Ex-Gov. SMITH, or he who is more familiarly known as "Extra Billy," resides in this town, on the Culpepper Road, and was found at his home yesterday, and was paroled. He is yet confined to his house with wounds received in battle and a fever that supervened. He talks despondingly of the success of rebeldom, and predicts that one more battle will settle the fate of the Confederate States. The fate of this prematurely old man is but another illustration that the way of the transgressor is hard. A man of limited capacity of mind, but of great social influence, he was one of the first to use his influence to sever the Union, and boastingly sought a traitor's doom. To-day he is a ruined man, prostrated upon a bed of sickness from which he will rise, if at all, a mere wreck of his former self. Of his two sons, one was killed in the battles in front of Richmond, and the other died from disease incurred by exposure serving the secession cause.

FROM ANOTHER CORRESPONDENT.

WARRENTON, Va., Monday, Nov. 10, 1862.

The order relieving Gen. McCLELLAN was received at his headquarters, at Rector Town, before midnight, Saturday. Gen. GORMAN and a few other officers were present at the time. The fact became known at daybreak among the soldiers, occasioning much excitement and discussion, but not the least indication of an outbreak. Gen. McCLELLAN'S Staff, as might be expected, were furious on the Government and mankind generally. Several officers tendered their resignations on Saturday, but these are generally considered to be of that number who are waiting for some excuse to turn up for abandoning the army.

Gens. BURNSIDE and McCLELLAN were over here together yesterday morning, accompanied by their Staffs, the best of feeling existing between them. Gen. BURNSIDE is loth to assume the new position, but evidently does so from the sense of the necessity of having a more vigorous leader. He rode out yesterday, about 1 o'clock, to inspect the troops, who were arriving from various directions.

Gen. SUMNER has returned, overtaking his command at Salem, which reached here about noon yesterday, in fine spirits. The old hero was received with the wildest demonstrations of delight by his troops.

A train of cars is expected here to-morrow. They continue to run up on the regular route as far as Salem. Unfounded rumor to the effect that a supply train had been cut off between Gainesville and that place, occasioned [illegible] yesterday.

Large numbers of stragglers are between here and the Potomac. It is found that many of them may be cut off by guerrillas getting into our rear through Snicker's Gap.

Fifteen hundred convalescents and exchanged prisoners, brought to Harper's Ferry on Monday, have mostly overtaken their regiments.

Heavy cannonading has been heard this forenoon, supposed to be from the extreme advance. The general impression is that large forces of the enemy still remain on the other side of the Blue Ridge. Affairs were quiet at Waterloo up to latest advices, no battle being anticipated.

Gen. McCLELLAN and Staff were expected to leave here last evening for Belle ie to-day for Trenton. There has been a change in the weather, it being very delightful to-day. The soldiers are abundantly supplied with rations, some sick overcoats and clothing. No battle is expected here shortly, the nearest of the enemy being some distance away.

Gen. BURNSIDE is loved and admired by all who know him, and, fully conversant with the plan of the campaign, as first laid down, will, all believe, carry it out effectually. The new troops, and those of the old army, save a portion of the Peninsula men, are delighted with his appointment.

The First New-Jersey Cavalry returned to Salem on Saturday, from a reconnoissance in the rear, having captured six of WARR'S guerrilla band. The enemy occupied Ashby's Gap an hour after we abandoned it, capturing some Sutlers' goods. From this rose numerous painful rumors, to the effect that our wagon trains were cut off, Harper's Ferry captured, &c.

OPERATIONS IN THE EXTREME FRONT.

The Reoccupation of Warrenton—Condition of the People—Gen. Pleasanton Across the Rappahannock—Position of the Rebel Army.

WARRENTON, Va., Friday, Nov. 7, 1862.

This place was reoccupied by the Union troops last evening at 6 o'clock, by the advance of Gen. REYNOLDS' command, from Salem, striking the Centreville pike and entering the town from a northerly direction. Gen. PLEASANTON'S command was within supporting distance at the west, on the Sperryville road, but their services were not required, as the rebel troops had all skedaddled. It is now known that this place has only been occupied recently by about 400 of the Thirteenth Virginia Cavalry, commanded by Col. PAYNE, (a native of the town,) with two mountain howitzers. With this small force, Col. PAYNE, by his activity, managed to completely deceive the various commanders sent to reconnoitre the place, making them believe it was defended by a much larger force than it really was. With his howitzers he would make rapid dashes in every direction where our scouts appeared, and managed to keep up appearances in a remarkable manner. Col. PAYNE had been ordered by Gen. SUMNER to hold the place at all hazards, promising a timely coöperation with his force. But all human calculations are liable to be thwarted, and the fates and Gen. PLEASANTON, in this instance, rendered it impossible for Gen. SUMNER to fulfill his promise. At 1 o'clock P. M., when Col. PAYNE'S pickets reported Union troops approaching from two different directions, and in such a manner as to completely cut off the expected relief, he very wisely concluded that discretion was the better part of valor, and marshaling his four hundred followers and fifty or more conscripts, skedaddled after the most approved fashion, taking the road which, if he travels far enough, will lead him to that delectable place known as Culpepper.

At 6 o'clock P. M. the advance guard of the Union force entered the town and found here in the hospitals some two hundred rebel soldiers, a majority of whom are more or less mutilated in their fair proportions by necessary amputation of one or more limbs. The wealth of female loveliness for which Warrenton is greatly celebrated, still remains here intact, and many an old acquaintance between the secesh ladies and the Union soldiers has been revived. Of secesh-looked males there are none to be seen upon the street. Those who did not feel it an important duty to answer the call of Jeff. DAVIS by volunteering to serve in his army have been ruthlessly torn from their homes by the Recruiting Sergeant under the Conscription act. Some of this last class were dragged of yesterday, and in several instances I know of, their families are left in hopeless destitution. Tell, gaunt old men, saunter about the street like spectres, and expressed themselves pleased with the "reoccupation;" "for," says an old resident, "we are almost starved out." Hog and hominy, it appears, has been the staple and almost the only articles of food obtainable. The stores are all closed, because the owners have nothing to sell but tobacco. The town is without any of the ordinary luxuries of life—such as groceries—which are considered as necessaries by many people. The want of coffee is not severely felt, for rye is a substitute that almost equals—if properly made—coffee itself, and is free from most of the objectionable qualities pertaining to coffee. Sugar—the last that was here—sold for $3 per pound; whisky (warranted to kill at 40 rods,) $20 per gallon, where it can be had at all; and it is fact, every article that is continued in civilized communities, when to be had at all, are sold at equally fabulous prices. At the hotel where I now write—the Warrenton House—the bill of fare is bacon, rice and apple-sauce for dinner; rice, apple-sauce and bacon for supper, with rye-coffee and flat-cakes ad nodum. For these rations the landlord gets $3 per day, and when his present stock is used up, he does not know where to replace it. Fodder, forage, &c., are equally scarce. I have been in the place all day and have spent hours in a fruitless search to get something for my horse to eat. He has gone to his rest to-night supperless. But he is surrounded by a large number of horses equally unfortunate. A train of cars, with provisions, is expected here to-morrow, and the telegraph operators on the following day, so that we confidently expect an improvement in our position at an early moment.

With others I rode into town from Gainesville this morning, in one of the coldest and most disagreeable snow-storms that it has ever been my fate to experience. The streets to-night are covered with snow, and everything about looks cheerless and uncomfortable as well may be imagined. We have but little appetite for hog and hominy, and it is only by offering large bribes that a little fuel can be obtained, to warm the otherwise cheerless room where I now write. Soldiers fare better than outsiders with the army, for they generally get their rations, and are prepared for nearly all emergencies, in mind if not literally in fact. There are some trees and fences left in these parts, and with rations and a fire they brave the storm and keep up a good exterior. The whole aspect of the place to-night more resembles Northern New-England in the dead of Winter, than a country village in the "Sunny South." There has been no sun visible here for several days, however, and we are anxiously looking for his cheerful face again.

A RICH ARRANGEMENT DISTURBED.

After Gen. PLEASANTON thrashed STUART near Ashby's Gap, the latter fell back along the base of the Blue Ridge, and continued to draw Gen. PLEASANTON south of Chester's Gap, where Gen. A. P. HILL'S force was stationed ready to fall on his rear. Had the plot succeeded, the whole face of matters in this section would have been changed. The trap was discovered in time to avoid a disaster, and instead of falling into it, Gen. PLEASANTON, when near Chester's Gap, crossed over to the Gaithill and Orleans road, and then taking a southwesterly direction, cut off Hill's rear, preventing him from extending the promised relief to Col. PAYNE in this place, and also forced him back upon HILL'S command.

Gen. STUART'S command is near at hand, and he will probably make his headquarters here to-day—but not to remain. The whole army is in motion, and in light marching order, is pressing forward into the very bowels of Dixie.

Gen. SIGEL is moving down the railroad, and was yesterday at Catlett's Station. Gen. BURNSIDE is to move toward Fredericksburgh, it is understood here; Gen. REYNOLDS' column, and all the other columns fill up the Gap to the base of the Blue Ridge, and everything is being swept before the mighty Union host; there is no rebel power that can stay the onward march of this army, I confidently believe.

Gen. REYNOLDS is in temporary command of the town, and will be relieved to-morrow by Gen. BURNSIDE, unless some unforeseen event transpires to change the aspect of affairs. Capt. ROYLE, of the Twenty-first New-York Volunteers, is Acting Provost-Marshal.

SATURDAY, Nov. 8, 1862.

GEN. PLEASANTON ACROSS THE RAPPAHANNOCK.

Old Sol made his appearance early this morning and everything and everybody looks more cheerful. Gen. BURNSIDE has not arrived yet, but is expected every hour. Gen. STUART who was expected to follow me here, it is now said is moving upon the Rappahannock. Gen. PLEASANTON crossed the Rappahannock yesterday, after a brief skirmish with Jos. JOHNSON'S command. A portion of Gen. STUART'S command is within a short distance of the Rappahannock. Several bridges have to be rebuilt before the army can move on in force. This will occasion a delay of only a few days.

THE POSITION OF THE REBEL ARMY.

LONGSTREET is supposed to be covering the rear of the rebel army near Winchester, and with D. H. HILL'S force in on our right flank across the Blue Ridge. Lee himself, with the bulk of his army, was yesterday between Culpepper and Gordonsville. LONGSTREET and A. P. HILL have also passed on in the same direction.

Gen. McCLELLAN, whose headquarters have been at Rectortown for several days, is expected here to-day. There was quite a brisk skirmish near the Rappahannock, near Sulphur Springs, yesterday. The rebels on duty there were driven into a mill. Our rifled cannon riddled the mill, and as the rebs attempted to escape, they were picked off by our sharpshooters. I have not been able to ascertain their loss in this affair.

The Occupation of Rappahannock Station by Gen. Bayard—An Artillery Skirmish—The Bridge and Railroad in Good Order.

RAPPAHANNOCK STATION, Saturday, Nov. 8, 1862.

The return of one to a place from which he had been, but a short time before, forced to leave incontinently, and with a sharp shower of grape and canister in his rear to expedite his movements, as may well be supposed, is fraught with no little degree of interest. It was with a remembrance of such an occasion, that I approached Rappahannock Station last evening, in the wake of BAYARD'S Cavalry. But a little more than two months ago, with the whole army commanded by Major-Gen. POPE at my heels, I was compelled to leave the very spot from which I now write under a force of circumstances which all are bound to recognize. The skedaddle of the Union army from the line of the Rappahannock cannot be fresh in the minds of every newspaper reader, and need not be particularly detailed at this time. It was a disgraceful, because unnecessary retreat. We again approach the scene of our former disgrace under more encouraging circumstances. The Union army, besides at Cedar Mountain, was then retreating before an exultant and overbearing foe; on the contrary, it is now advancing upon or to circumvent that same foe, and with an encouraging prospect of success. Then the army was, to a certain extent, demoralized, as all retreating armies must, to a greater or less extent, necessarily be; but now the scene is reversed, and the enemy, though doing it sullkily, is fleeing before it.

Gen. BAYARD, with cavalry and artillery, approached the scene of their former triumph, last evening after nightfall. A small picket, stationed on the Rappahannock Bridge, received the first intimation of the approach of a Union force, by a shell passing over their heads, and landing in the enemy's camp beyond, to which the picket-guard speedily retreated in the utmost consternation; the camp, consisting of about one regiment of infantry, and a small force of cavalry, and four guns, was at once in a terrible commotion; the camp-fires were extinguished, and the force fell back to the main camp, after responding to the abrupt salutation they had received from a 6-pounder. The lights having been extinguished, left no mark for the artillerists, and consequently but few shots were fired. This morning the enemy, having received reinforcements, took a favorable position for artillery practice, and commenced returning in kind the compliments extended to them last evening. Our six-pounders were put to the work in hand with spirit, and the gunners on the opposite side of the river were forced to retire beyond the reach of powder and ball. The enemy's fire was very much at random, and no one was seriously injured in the Union force. Gen. BAYARD, acting under orders, declined to avail himself of a tempting opportunity afforded him to cross the river and whip the whole camp, and the enemy having retired, we rested in position. These matters stand here to night.

The bridge at this point is in good condition, and we shall not be surprised to see the steam horse, with the Union flag set, crossing the Rappahannock again, within a few days, headed for Culpepper. The channel at this point is low and can be forded at many points other than the regular fords. Gen. PLEASANTON, on the extreme right of the army, has crossed the river on a reconnoissance, and no one need feel surprised to hear that Gen. BAYARD has gone off on a similar project for the left flank, at an early day. The owners of property in this vicinity have not manifested any great degree of enterprise in the way of improvements, since my last visit to the place. A few chantlers, with here and there a house in the distance, is all that there is to be seen to relieve the barren waste—made so by the exigencies of the war.

Gen. BAYARD'S Command for the last ten days has been constantly on the move. Starting from Chantilly in the early part of last week it was engaged with STUART'S force at Aldie—an account of which I furnished at the time. Rebel soldiers captured recently say that in the fight at Aldie, their loss was much more heavy than we had any knowledge of; they estimate the rebel loss to have averaged two men in every company engaged. Almost daily from that time to the present, Gen. BAYARD has been skirmishing with the enemy, everywhere defeating him and taking many prisoners. This force has rendered heretofore distinguished service, particularly when covering the rear of Gen. POPE'S army last August, on its retreat from the fatal field of Slaughter Mountain, until that army was in front of Washington. It is now in better condition than ever before, notwithstanding its arduous service. It has recently received, and to-day equals almost any cavalry force, in efficiency, in the world.

The Capture of Warrenton—The Cars Running Through Thoroughfare Gap, &c.

GAINESVILLE, Va., Thursday, Nov. 6, 1862.

We have information, to-day, that Gen. PLEASANTON took Warrenton, yesterday, after a short but sharp engagement. The headquarters of Gen. McCLELLAN were yesterday at Rectortown, to which place there is telegraphic communication, to-day. The headquarters of Gen. SIGEL were established at this place yesterday, but a portion of his command—the left wing—will advance, to-day, toward and perhaps as far as Warrenton, to which place Gen. SIGEL will doubtless move to-morrow or next day. The different army corps are in motion, on both sides, and it is not unlikely that there will be a race for Richmond. The pickets of McCLELLAN'S and SIGEL'S commands came within sight of each other, yesterday, in Bull Run Valley. Gen. PLEASANTON, it seems, after thrashing STUART, near Ashby's Gap, immediately marched for Warrenton, where he arrived last evening.

The cars on the Manassas Gap Railroad run to Salem, through Thoroughfare Gap.

Our pickets were undisturbed, last night.

The rebels are looking with great anxiety for the result of the election in New-York. The result is not known here, yet. They express a hope that STANDISH has been elected, because it will give promise of an early peace—that is, if the Democratic Party can once more gain the ascendancy in the Free States, they will recognize the Jeff. Davis Government, and that will end the war.

Col. ROBINSON, Provost-Marshal, is engaged taking testimony to show who fired the village of Haymarket, on Tuesday, and by whose order it was done. Nine houses were destroyed.

Most of the men in this corps are greatly in want of blankets.

The Advance to Catlett's Station—The Snow Storm.

MANASSAS, Friday, Nov. 7, 1862.

Gen. PATTERSON, late of SIGEL'S Division, made an advance from Bristow's Station, four miles beyond here, last night, to Catlett's Station, near Warrenton Junction, on the railroad, but returned to the former place this morning, having found a large force of rebel cavalry at the latter place. The entire force at this place has just received orders to prepare to march at a moment's notice, probably up the Warrenton road.

A heavy and cold snow-storm has prevailed all the morning, and up to three o'clock has fallen flat. The ground is covered, and the troops, although in excellent spirits, are doing the best they can to make themselves comfortable in their shelter tents. Some alarm was created in consequence of the non-arrival of trains from Alexandria last night, but subsequent information allayed all fears of another rebel raid. Two of the participants in the late raid upon the wood train at this place are prisoners at Gen. SIGEL'S headquarters. They belong to the cavalry arm of the rebel service, and were the two who removed the heads of the spikes confining the rails. There were but five concerned in the transaction. Repairs are being made upon the Dumfries branch road, near this place. ARGUS.

A Salute in Hartford in Honor of Gen. Burnside.

HARTFORD, Conn., Tuesday, Nov. 11.

Yesterday at noon thirty-four guns were fired here, by order of Gov. BUCKINGHAM, of this State, in honor of the appointment of Gen. BURNSIDE to the command of the Army of the Potomac.

NEWS FROM RICHMOND.

Further Views of the Results of Northern Elections.

NO CHANCE FOR EUROPEAN INTERVENTION.

The Richmond Examiner of Nov. 6 is received. Speaking of the results of Northern elections, it says:

"These astonishing manifestations from the North convey the idea of an emphatic and impressive popular verdict against the Abolition faction, which has ruled the Government at Washington. The Northern papers attempt to lessen the value of the results of the elections in the eyes of the South. The truth, however, is determined by the circumstance that the principal issue on which the recent contests in the North was contested was, that the Democrats were a peace Party in disguise, and with this issue thrust in their faces, the people of the three most populous States in the North have given unprecedented majorities to the Democratic candidates, and a blow to the Abolitionists at the ballot-box that will consign them into the background."

NO PROSPECT OF INTERVENTION.

The Examiner says:

"The prospects of European intervention have dissolved like a mere wreath. But a month ago there were hopeful indications that England and France were about to take some action in this case that would be favorable to the South. Our position was relented not only in the journals of the country, but in the minds of intelligent Europeans on this side the Atlantic.

It is known that on the strength of the confidence of our national adversaries being fully realized, in England and France, transactions have been entered into, some extent by foreign capitalists in Confederate bonds at eighty-six cents on the dollar. There is, however, no mistaking the significance of the speech of the British Secretary of War, in which he states that the "South has not as yet accomplished her independence," and must be regarded as a belligerent, holding an uncertain position in an uncertain war. The British Government will be in no way committed, from time during the continuance of this war, recognize the Southern Confederacy, at one of the independent Powers of the earth, or interfere to limit the duration of this war."

FEDERAL PRISONERS.

Twenty-six Federal prisoners were received at the Libby Prison on Thursday night, and Lynchburgh, and seven prisoners were received yesterday from the White House.

UNEMPLOYED NEGROES.

While the soldiers who enlisted to fight, are engaged at Drury's and Chaffin's Bluffs in felling trees and digging up to their knees in mud and water, Richmond is full of free negroes and slaves, the vast of whose occupation is, contrasting the warriors. The Yankees set an example in our authorities in their employment of negroes.

WILD TURKEYS ON THE JAMES.

Wild turkeys are quite plenty on the James River, in the vicinity of Drury's and Chaffin's Bluffs. The officers and soldiers stationed there add to their rations by shooting them.

THE PRICE OF GOLD.

Gold is selling in Richmond at $2.25 to $2.50, a decline of 50 cents within the week.

FROM NORTHERN VIRGINIA.

It is reported that Gen. LEE, having drawn all the enemy into a trap at Sudsbury, had taken them and routed them, with great slaughter. We have failed to obtain from the War Office confirmation of this pleasing story.

OPERATIONS ON THE TEXAN COAST.

The Capture of Corpus Christi, Galveston, and Sabine City.

REAR-ADMIRAL FARRAGUT'S REPORT.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Nov. 11.

The Navy Department has received yesterday dispatches from Rear-Admiral FARRAGUT, dated Pensacola Bay, Oct. 18. After stating that Galveston, Corpus Christi, and Sabine City, and the adjacent waters are now in our possession, he says: "A short time ago, I sent down the coast of Texas Acting-Volunteer-Lieut. J. W. KITTERSON, with the ship Arthur, the little steamer Sachem, and a launch, with which force he said he could take Corpus Christi and the waters adjacent, whence we heard of the only small craft running to Havana. He succeeded very well; took the places; made several captures, and compelled the enemy to burn several of their vessels; but on one occasion venturing on shore with the small boat, he was surrounded and taken prisoner, and carried to Houston, where they paroled him on condition that he should go North, and not serve till regularly exchanged.

I next sent the Kensington, Acting-Master CROCKER, commanding, with the Rachel Seamen and a launch with a howitzer, to Sabine Pass. His, too, succeeded well. He found at the bar one of the mortar schooners, Henry James, Acting-Master FERNALD, commanding, whom he invited to take part with him, which he did; and, according to Acting-Master CROCKER'S report, performed his duty with great credit. They took the fort and are still going ahead briskly, having taken several prizes, one of which arrived here yesterday with dispatches.

I sent Commander BERRIAN, with the gunboats Owasco, Harriet Lane, Clifton and Westfield, to take Galveston, which he did, in the shortest time, and without the loss of a man. It appears that the first shot from the Owasco exploded directly over the heads of the men at and around the big gun—their main reliance—and the enemy left. A flag of truce was hoisted, and the preliminaries arranged for a surrender, which took place on the 9th inst. Corpus Christi, the adjacent waters are still held by the Sachem, and other small vessels.

MOVEMENTS OF GEN. McCLELLAN.

PHILADELPHIA, Tuesday, Nov. 11.

A band of music is in attendance at the Baltimore depôt to receive Gen. McCLELLAN. He will reach there about midnight, and it is believed he will proceed immediately by special train to Trenton, N. J.

TRENTON, N. J., Tuesday, Nov. 11.

Gen. McCLELLAN will arrive here at 2 A. M., of the 13th. Preparations have been made to extend him a proper reception.

BALTIMORE, Tuesday, Nov. 11—6:20 P. M.

McCLELLAN has just arrived. He goes through to Philadelphia immediately.

Pennsylvania Frightened Again—Reported Invasion of the State.

HARRISBURGH, Tuesday, Nov. 11.

It is reported this afternoon that the rebels were in Mercersburgh, and on the way to Chambersburgh. It is probably unfounded, and caused by squads of Union cavalry purchasing horses.

THE SURRENDER OF HARPER'S FERRY.

Report of the Military Commission.

From the Tribune.

The Commission, consisting of Maj.-Gen. D. Hunter, U. S. A. of Vols., President; Major-Gen. G. Cadwalader, U. S. A. of Vols.; Brig.-Gen. G. C. Auger, U. S. A. of Vols.; Major Dean Platt, A. A. G. of Vols.; Capt. F. Ball, A. D. C. of Vols., Col. C. Holt, Judge-Advocate General, called by the Government to investigate the conduct of certain officers connected with, and the circumstances attending the surrender of Maryland Heights and Harper's Ferry, have the honor to report the following:

[illegible] Gen. White entered Harper's Ferry with his force from Winchester. The [illegible] he was ordered to Martinsburgh, to take command of the forces there. On the 6th of September he was ordered to Harper's Ferry, where he remained until the surrender, without assuming the command.

On the 7th of September, Gen. McClellan, the newly appointed leading president Mac, left Washington under orders issued some days previously, to drive the enemy from Maryland. That night he established his headquarters at Rockville, from which place, on the 11th of September, he telegraphed to Gen. Halleck to have Col. Miles ordered to join him at Frederick.

On the 6th of September Col. Thomas H. Ford, Thirty-second Ohio, assumed command of the forces on Maryland Heights. Forces were placed at Solomon's Gap, and at Sandy Hook. Those at Sandy Hook, under Col. Maulsby, retired by Col. Miles' order to the eastern slope of Maryland Heights, two or three days previous to their evacuation by Col. Ford. On the 12th of September the force at Solomon's Gap was driven in by the enemy. Col. Ford called upon Col. Miles for reinforcements. The One Hundred and Twenty-sixth New-York and the Thirty-ninth New-York (German Rifles) were sent him on Friday the 12th of September, and on the morning of the 13th he was further reinforced by the One Hundred and Fifteenth New-York and a portion of a Maryland regiment under Lieut.-Col. Downey.

Col. Ford made requisition for axes and spades to enable him to construct defences on the Heights, but obtained none. With his axes, belonging to some Maryland troops, hiring all that could be obtained, he erected breastworks on lower ground, on the eastern slope of the crest of the Heights, and a few rifle pits made for a short distance in front of the breastworks.

The ammunition Col. Ford had was stationed at various points on Maryland Heights, the principal force being on the crest of the hill near the breastwork and rock-out. Skirmishing commenced on Friday, the 12th, on the crest of the hill.

Early on the morning of the 13th, the enemy made their appearance on the crest of the hill, and after some time, Ford ordered the Ohio regiment to the breastwork, where they were rallied. About 8 o'clock, a desperate attack was made, which the troops behind the breastwork repulsed for a short time, and until Col. Ford had ordered the Twelfth New-York, and Downey's and Twenty-third New-York Regiment, as some witnesses stated, to the rear of the Heights, where they were broke and fled in utter confusion. Most and most of the officers behind the breastwork, fled with the rest, except by Col. Ford, Lieut. Barnes, Capt. Pierce, and some Captains of other regiments, directed by Col. Miles, then on the Heights.

Soon after, the remaining forces at the breastwork fell back, under a repeated order from Major Russell, who stated that he had gone to Col. Ford's order; merely that they were ordered to retire, so as to avoid being cut off by the enemy, and that the order was not given by Col. Ford. They were conducted to a place, so as to avoid being cut off by the enemy, and that the order was not given by Col. Ford. They were conducted to a place, so as to avoid being cut off by the enemy, and that the order was not given by Col. Ford. They advanced some distance up the Heights, but did not engage the breastworks.

At 7 of evening Col. Miles was on Maryland Heights for some hours, consulting with Col. Ford. He left Maryland Heights at 12 o'clock, without finally ordering Col. Ford to evacuate the Heights, but instructing him in case he was compelled to do so, to spike his guns and throw the heavy siege guns down the mountain.

About 3 o'clock, perhaps a little later, by the order of Col. Ford, the Heights were abandoned, the guns being spiked, according to instructions.

On Sunday, Col. D'Epeny sent over to the Maryland Heights four companies under Maj. Wood, who had supplied their opposition, four brass 12-pounders, two of which were imperfectly spiked, and a wagon load of ammunition.

Gen. White, on his return to Harper's Ferry on the 14th of September, commented to Col. Miles the propriety of contracting his lines on Bolivar Heights so as to make a better defence, stating that he was determined to make his stand on Bolivar Heights. Gen. White also urged the importance of holding Maryland Heights, even should it require the taking the entire force over there from Harper's Ferry. Col. Miles, rather his views to hold Harper's Ferry to the last extremity, while admitting the importance of Maryland Heights, seemed to regard them as applying to the town of Harper's Ferry, and held that to leave the Heights was to leave a position Maryland Heights would be disbarring his forces.

Gen. McClellan established his headquarters at Frederick City on the morning of the 12th of September. On the night of the 12th, after the evacuation of Maryland Heights, Col. Miles directed Capt. (now Major) Russell, of the Maryland Cavalry, to take with him 40 of his men, and endeavor to get through the enemy's lines, and report some one to Gen. McClellan if possible—and to report the condition of Harper's Ferry; that it could not hold out more than a few days, and to urge the sending of reinforcements. Capt. Russell reached Gen. McClellan's headquarters at Frederick, 9 A. M. on Sunday, the 14th of September, and reported his message by Gen. Miles. Immediately upon his arrival Gen. McClellan sent off a messenger, as Capt. Russell understood, to Gen. Franklin.

At 10 A. M., Capt. Russell left for Gen. Franklin's command, with a communication to Gen. Franklin from Gen. McClellan. He reached Gen. Franklin about 3 o'clock that afternoon, and found him engaged with the enemy at Crampton's Gap. The firing were driven from the Gap, and the next morning, Monday, Gen. Franklin passed through the Gap, and marched a mile and a half during the enemy drawn up in line of battle in the rear, with his own forces up in line of battle. While thus situated, the cannonading in the direction of Harper's Ferry, which had been heard very distinctly all the morning, Harper's Ferry being about seven miles distant—suddenly ceased, whereupon Gen. Franklin sent word to Gen. McClellan of the probable surrender of Harper's Ferry by Col. Miles, and did not deem it necessary to proceed further in that direction.

The battle of South Mountain was fought on Sunday, the 14th.

On the same day, (Sunday,) during the afternoon, the enemy at Harper's Ferry attacked the extreme left of the line on Bolivar Heights, but after some time were repulsed by the troops under command of Gen. White.

Sunday night the cavalry at Harper's Ferry made their escape, under Col. Davis, of the Twelfth Illinois Cavalry, by permission of Col. Miles, and reached Greencastle, Penn., the next morning, capturing an ammunition train belonging to Gen. Longstreet, consisting of some 60 or 80 wagons. The Commission regard this escape of the cavalry, &c.

Several of the infantry officers desired permission to cut their way out at the same time the cavalry made their escape, but Col. Miles refused, upon the ground that he had never been ordered to hold Harper's Ferry to the last extremity.

On the morning of the 15th, the enemy opened their batteries from several points—seven to nine as estimated by different witnesses—directing their attack principally upon our batteries on the left of Bolivar Heights. The attack commenced at daybreak. About 7 o'clock, Col. Miles represented to Gen. White that it would be necessary to surrender.

Gen. White suggested that the brigade commanders be called together, which was done. Col. Miles stated that the ammunition for the batteries was exhausted, and he had about made up his mind to surrender. That was agreed to by all present, and Gen. White was sent by Col. Miles to arrange terms. The white flag was raised by order of Col. Miles, but the enemy did not cease fire for some half or three-quarters of an hour after. Col. Miles was mortally wounded after the white flag was raised. The surrender was agreed upon about 8 A. M. on Monday, the 15th of September.

The following was the testimony respectively of the officers commanding batteries: At the time of the surrender, Capt. Von Scheele had some ammunition, could not tell what amount, but mostly shrapnel; and lost about 100 rounds on Saturday, the 13th, by the explosion of a limber caused by one of the enemy's shells. Capt. Rigby had expended, during the siege of Harper's Ferry, about 600 rounds, with the exception of canister; had nothing but canister left. Capt. Potts had expended about 1,000 rounds, with the exception of canister; had only canister left. Capt. Graham had but two guns of his battery under his immediate command on the morning of the surrender; had probably 100 rounds of all kinds, but no long-time fused. Capt. Phillips had expended all his ammunition, except some 40 rounds of canister, and some long-range shell too large for his guns. Capt. McGilvary's Battery had been spiked and left on Maryland Heights on Saturday.

It appears that during the siege, and shortly previous, Col. Miles paroled several Confederate prisoners, permitting them to pass through our lines. During one week previous to the evacuation of Maryland Heights, a Lieut. Rouse, of the Twelfth Virginia Cavalry, who had been engaged in a raid upon a train from Harper's Ferry to Winchester a short time before, was captured and brought into Harper's Ferry. He escaped while on the way to the hospital to have his wounds dressed, but was retaken. He was paroled, but returned in command of some rebel cavalry on the morning of the surrender.

The attention of Gen. A. P. Hill was called to the fact that Lieut. Rouse was a paroled prisoner, but no attention was paid to it. Lieut. Rouse himself, on being spoken to about it, laughed at the idea of observing his parole. On Saturday, the day of the attack upon and evacuating of Maryland Heights, Col. Miles directed that sixteen Confederate prisoners be permitted to pass through our lines to rejoin the rebel army at Winchester. Other cases are testified to, but these are the most important.

Of the subordinate officers referred to in this case, (Brig.-Gen. Julius White and Chas. D'Utassy and Taylor,) the Commission finds with the exception of Col. Thomas H. Ford, nothing in their conduct that calls for censure. Gen. Julius White merits its approbation. He appears from the evidence to have acted with decided capability and courage.

In this connection the Commission calls attention to the disgraceful behavior of the One Hundred and Twenty-third, New-York Regiment, Infantry, [illegible] Maryland Heights, [illegible] the surrender, [illegible] the enemy, [illegible] Maryland Heights, [illegible] Harper's Ferry, [illegible] Maryland Heights, [illegible] Harper's Ferry, [illegible] Maryland Heights, [illegible] Harper's Ferry

TUESDAY, Nov. 11—P. M.

The Treasury of the United States, through the Assistant Treasurer in this City, is in the market to-day for $10,000,000 or $12,000,000, by way of temporary loan to the Government for fifteen days, in anticipation of the proceeds of $13,420,550 of 7.30 per cent. Treasury Bonds, to be awarded on Monday next to the highest bidders. This application was not generally known until late in the forenoon, nor was it felt on the Stock or Money market until after the sum required was practically made up at Bank, at the rate of 5 ⅌ cent. Internet, and half the sum paid in. But at the Second Board of the Stock Exchange the premonitory symptoms of a decline in prices from this cause were followed up by a more general weakness in the bidding, particularly on the Western shares and Hudson River. The advance in the Eries and New-York Central since yesterday morning was also lost, and, for a brief time, the excitement in the share market amounted almost to a panic.

Later in the afternoon there was a large attendance of Brokers and Jobbers at the outside room on William-street, and while there was no material recovery in prices from the printed sales, and in some instances even lower figures accepted, the market was active on the railway shares, and left off with a fair degree of steadiness, about as follows, compared with Monday afternoon:

The price of Money to the Stock and Money Brokers to-day, was advanced in a good many instances from 5 to 6 ⅌ cent. per annum, and in others, on select collateral, from 4 to 5 ⅌ cent, because of the opportunity afforded to lenders to employ their surplus means on temporary accommodation to the Government.

The price of Gold, which opened 1⅛ ⅌ cent. higher than yesterday afternoon, and with sales at 132¼@133 ⅌ cent., fell off suddenly to 132¼@132½ before the close of 'Change hour, and later in the afternoon dropped to 131 ⅌ cent. In like manner, Exchange, which sold early in the day at 147 ⅌ cent., subsequently sold at 146¾@146 and at the very close was unsettled at 146@146¼ ⅌ cent. The change in the price of Money, noticed above, appears to have influenced demand loans upon the pledge of Gold and Foreign Bills quite as decidedly as the loans made upon Stocks. In truth, the disturbance in, if anything, more sections of these securities, and this sensitiveness to the changes in the Money Market only proves what has heretofore been alleged by the public Press, that a vast amount of Gold has been bought upon speculation, only to be borrowed upon at pretty full value at bank.

The following is the comparative statement of the Bullion (exclusive of Specie) from the port of New-York to Foreign Ports, for the week ending Nov. 11 and since Jan. 1:

The Stock Exchange Board, to-day, suspended from membership, for 60 days—the above was then prescribed by the recent rule on the subject—two of their members, of the firm of Messrs. Lockwood & Co., for doing business under one-eighth of 1 ⅌ cent. for account of outside Brokers and Jobbers. The rule being imperative, and the evidence in this instance conclusive—and as we understand it, frankly avowed by the same partner in the firm—the Board could scarcely do less than enforce their own rule. The occurrence has nevertheless given occasion to considerable discussion on the Street in reference to the policy of an open and Iidependent Stock Exchange Board.

Mr. Adrian H. Muller will hold an extensive sale of first-class Railroad Stocks and Bonds, Insurance, Gas-Light and Bank Stocks to-morrow, (Wednesday,) 12th inst., at the Merchants' Exchange Salesroom, No. 111 Broadway, for account of Executors and Administrators.

The day's business at the Office of the Assistant Treasurer of the United States was as follows: Receipts, $6,162,535 76, including for customs, $241,000; payments, $878,248 80. Balance, $12,486,644.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

Our latest advices from the Army of the Potomac lead us to the belief that a portion of the rebel army is still in the Shenandoah Valley—exactly where is not yet ascertained. The forces under Stonewall JACKSON and A. P. HILL, are said to be there—those under LONGSTREET and other commanders at Culpepper having been thrown forward to prevent our army from getting between the main body of the rebel army and Richmond. LEE is also said to be now at Culpepper, where he has his headquarters. We have no reports of the movements made by our army yesterday.

It was reported from Manassas Junction on the 9th, that a considerable portion of SIGEL'S Corps had moved from their late position in front along the line of the Manassas Railroad to attend especially to the possible movements of JACKSON, who is believed to be still in the valley. Gen. BURNSIDE was on the way to Rappahannock Station, with sufficient infantry and artillery to hold the important bridge there, with the assistance of BAYARD'S Cavalry, who have had it in possession unchanged, though requiring strengthening to bear our immense army trains.

A dispatch to the Philadelphia Inquirer dated Baltimore, Nov. 10, says: "From the most reliable secession sources here, who have relatives in the South, I learn that JEFF. DAVIS reviewed Gen. LEE'S rebel army, eighty thousand strong, at Winchester ten days ago. All were in new uniforms, and the officers were even dressed out with white kid gloves. The same informants are confident that LEE'S whole army has escaped to Gordonsville."

Gen. MCCLELLAN and his personal Staff, left Warrenton at 11 o'clock yesterday forenoon, and arrived in Washington in time to connect with the 6 P. M. train for the North. He was expected to arrive in Trenton at 3 o'clock this morning. At Warrenton Junction the troops called upon the General to say a few words, and in response he urged them to "stand by BURNSIDE as they had stood by him, and all would be well." Before leaving the army he issued a farewell order which was read to the troops at dress parade. The order is given elsewhere.

A special dispatch informs us that Gen. BURNSIDE and Staff arrived at Nashville on Monday night. The enemy is said to be still in considerable force at Murfreesboro; but they are retreating as rapidly as possible beyond the Tennessee River.

Our Key West correspondence, which is to the 3d inst., will be found interesting. The business of capturing prizes in the Gulf is as brisk as ever; no less than eight, at the date of our correspondent's letter, lying in the harbor of Key West awaiting adjudication by the Admiralty Court. Yellow fever had entirely disappeared from the town, but two cases had occurred at Fort Jefferson, on Tortugas Island. They were of a mild type, however, and no fears were entertained that the disease would become unmanageable.

An order has been issued from the War Department relative to the finding of the Military Commission in the case of the Harper's Ferry surrender. Col. FORNEY, by this order, is dismissed from the service, as is also Major BEAMS, of the One Hundred and Twenty-sixth New-York Infantry. The regiment stated to have behaved badly. Brig.-Gen. JULIUS WHITE is fully exonerated from all blame, as are also all the subordinate officers. The Commission, whose finding in this case will be found on our second page, is dissolved.

GENERAL NEWS.

The Supervisors met at noon yesterday as a Board of County Canvassers. The returns were unusually correct, and only in one or two instances was it found necessary to lay them over for correction. In those cases the errors were those of omission, and evidently clerical. The majorities do not differ in any material degree, and the exact vote will not be affected. The Wards canvassed were the First, Second, Third, Fourth, Sixth, Seventh and Thirteenth. The Board adjourned to meet to-day, at noon.

The Delaware Republican sums up the result of the election in that State, as follows: "WILLIAM CANNON—Union—has been elected Governor by 111 majority; WILLIAM TEMPLE, Bayardite, has been elected to Congress by 87 majority. In New Castle County every Union candidate is elected by majorities ranging from 594 up to 686. In Kent and Sussex Counties every Bayardite is elected. The Legislature will stand as follows: Senate—four Union to five Bayardites; House—seven Unionists, fourteen Bayardites. The great Seceder will consequently be returned to the U. S. Senate. It is certain that the fraudulent votes cast, more than equal TEMPLE'S majority for Congress, and if a thorough investigation could be had, the result in the Sussex County legislative ticket might be different. We do not know, however, that any contest is proposed; at any rate, rebellion in consequence of defeat has not been thought of."

We learn from the Nashville Dispatch that [illegible]

[illegible] of its integrity, it must hold the life, liberty and property of the rebellious subjects, the chattels and possessions of war. And it has precisely the same right to confiscate and liberate the slaves of rebels, as a means of prosecuting the war and making it effective, which it has to seize their property or imprison their persons.

But it is urged that this measure tends to incite insurrection among the slaves, and thus to involve the innocent in destruction. Whose duty is it to protect them against such calamities? Whose duty is it to keep the slaves in subjection and to guard the women and children of the slave plantations against their violence? Clearly that of the slave-owners themselves. If they are unable to do this, and call on the General Government, through their State authorities, to aid them in it, it is the duty of that Government to give them that aid,—but only when they acknowledge its authority, and on the basis of that acknowledgement claim its protection. But there is no pretence here that they are unable to prevent or suppress insurrections. They have their whole population under arms. They can turn the whole power of their armies against their slaves at an hour's notice, and thus render revolt impossible. Why do they not do this? Because they want to employ their troops against us! And they expect us to keep or leave their slaves in subjection, so that they may be free to do so! We must not touch their slaves, lest we should thus put them under the necessity of using their troops elsewhere than against us. That seems to us an absolutely conclusive argument on the other side.

With the exception of a very few Abolitionists, nobody at the North was ever in favor of waging war upon the South for the purpose of freeing its slaves. The great body of the Republicans, as of every other party at the North, would to-day oppose a war waged for such a purpose. President LINCOLN would be the last man living to commence such a war, or give it his support. The war is waged now, as it has been from the beginning, to crush the rebellion and restore the Union and the supremacy of the Constitution. This is its sole and exclusive object. But against the attainment of that object, Slavery proves to be a formidable and, apparently, a fatal obstacle. It is felt and seen to be the main strength of the rebellion. It is the basis on which it rests. Instead of being, as we had supposed it would be, an element of weakness to the South in war, it supplies them with food, with labor, with all the home comforts they require, and thus sends to the field the whole fighting population of the Southern States. There is no law of Nations, of the Constitution, or of common sense, which requires or permits us to leave so powerful a weapon in the hands of our enemies, untouched. It is our duty, if we seek success, to wrest it from their hands, or to paralyze it in their grasp.

Democratic orators and journalists are speculating largely on the probability that President LINCOLN will revoke this proclamation, or fail to fulfill the menace which it involves. Why they should desire him to do so they have not yet made clear. If they regard Slavery as of more value than the Union—if they prefer that the Government should perish rather than Slavery be disturbed—their action is natural and easily understood. But they have hitherto always disclaimed such a preference. They profess a desire to see the war prosecuted with vigor, and the rebellion crushed. If they are sincere in these professions, they cannot object to emancipation as a legitimate weapon for the accomplishment of these ends.

AN UN-SENATORIAL PROCEEDING.—We learn, with great surprise, by telegraph from Albany, that "Senator HARRIS, in an address to the law students at the Albany Law School, said he was grieved and indignant at the removal of Gen. MCCLELLAN, regarding it as a fatal mistake, and that he had written a letter to Gen. MCCLELLAN stating his opinion."

Senator HARRIS, like every other citizen, has an undoubted right to entertain and express his opinions concerning this or any other act of the Government. But as a matter of taste and propriety he would have done much better, in our judgment, to have abstained from any such denunciation. His opinions as a Senator will carry a certain weight over and above their intrinsic value; and in this instance that weight will go toward creating disaffection in the army, and a partisan hostility among the people toward the Government, which will retard rather than aid the vigorous and successful prosecution of the war.

We do not know how far the military acts of the Administration enter as necessary topics of discussion into the lectures which Senator HARRIS delivers to the pupils of the Albany Law School. But we fail to see how any good can result, either, to them or the country, from such untimely and unwarranted censures.

SPIRIT OF OUR ARMY.—Our correspondents with the army, who write since the removal of Gen. MCCLELLAN, do not mention any indications of that mutinous spirit which some who knew nothing about the army feared might ensue upon the displacement of a commander whom the soldiers honored and loved. On the contrary, several letters which we publish this morning, from correspondents with different corps of the Army of the Potomac, expressly state that the army is well satisfied with the change, and that the soldiers in general are delighted at the prospect of more active and effective work under Gen. BURNSIDE.

Unquestionably, the Army of the Potomac liked Gen. MCCLELLAN. Pity it would have been if they had not. He was always attentive to the wants of his men, considerate of their comfort, anxious to redress their grievances, and courteous in his intercourse with all of them. He strove to win their good will, and succeeded. But our soldiers, after all, are very impatient of inactivity and de-[illegible] "world in arms? They are not men who have [illegible] to adopt the army as a profession; they are citizens militant, who have drawn the sword that they may put down a rebellion, and are anxious to do the work and return to peaceful citizenship again.

The appointment of Gen. BURNSIDE, if it have any significance at all, signifies that under him they are quickly to be gratified in this respect—which is them is far more than any minor blemishes of an inefficient officer, or any attentions to their cases after they are half-ruined through inactivity and the shovel. If Gen. BURNSIDE gives the army of the Potomac work and victory—as it is in his power to do—there will soon be honor and love for him on the part of the troops greater even than there has been hitherto, and far warmer than anything that has yet been exhibited toward any commander.

There is No Peace.

JOHN VAN BUREN is out again, babbling of peace. The same notion is obscurely floating in sundry brains. The late canvass tended to unsettle the old ideas on the subject. People hearing the word so often—and a very pleasant word, too—almost insensibly to themselves get to fancy that there might be something in it.

Of course, there is a sense in which we are all peace men. Nobody would think of prolonging this war for an instant for its own sake. War is always frightful—we all know it. Christian civilization has advanced, but war still remains essentially barbarous—the same appalling scourge it ever has been. Boast as we may, war is not humanized, and cannot be. An ancient battle-field and a modern battle-field differ only in the instruments of slaughter. Bebrieacum and Antietam are in all material respects the same. The ancient TACITUS, who pictured the "plain still covered with bodies gashed and mangled, with broken limbs, and men and horses in one promiscuous carnage, clotted gore, and filth and putrefaction—the whole a dreary waste, the devastation of nature shocking to humanity," would have to dip his pencil in the same fearful colors, were he alive, to portray an American battle-field now. Of course we all lament that such things should be. And when the time comes for them to be ended we shall make every temple resound with thanksgiving, and the very canopy above us ring with jubilation. But wherefore talk of this now? As well prattle of the golden age. Peace is not our present lot, nor can be. Though, perhaps, not six months distant, it is yet, so far as relates to all the practical concerns of to-day, as remote as the millenium. Our present business is war, and nothing else. It is a necessity as inexorable as fate.

"Peace," wrote NAPOLEON, from the heart of Germany, to his brother JOSEPH, who wanted peace, "is a word that means nothing. It is the conditions of peace that are all." The Emperor fought Austerlitz, and then—not until then—was peace a possibility. He made it, because he dictated it. We can have no peace that we do not dictate—or rather have not already dictated—for the articles were prescribed and proclaimed long ago, in fact, at the flash of the first gun against the assailants of Sumter. These articles of peace are the articles of the Constitution of the United States of America, made and confirmed in convention by the unanimous consent of the States present, the seventeenth day of September in the year of our Lord 1787, and accredited by the signature of GEORGE WASHINGTON, President. Peace is but a word. It is the conditions of peace that are all. And these are the only conditions—nothing more, nothing less. Our Austerlitz is yet to come that shall secure them.

In other wars there may be negotiations, even while the war rages. In this none. In our last war with England both belligerents had Peace Commissioners at Ghent before the struggle was half out. There can be nothing of the kind in this conflict with rebellion. Parleying is impossible; for the only language our Government can use is unconditional demand, and the only language it can listen to is unconditional submission. Government is the executor of law; and law does not negotiate, it presides—it does not compromise, it punishes. The officer of the law does not go into a conference with a burglar or a murderer; nor can we, any more, do so with traitors. To compound with rebels is to sacrifice the authority of law, without which law is nothing. The Government has no alternative but to go straight on to the end in the vindication of its authority.

If we are to attach any meaning to this loose talk about peace, there is but one thing it can signify—and that is treason. In strict logic, it inevitably comes to that. Opposition to the war against rebellion is essentially no better than rebellion itself. It should never be for a moment forgotten that this war is not an Administration war, like that with England in 1812, or with Mexico in 1846—a war in which simply the international rights and interests of the Republic are concerned, and which might be opposed without disloyalty, under some different views of those rights and interests. It is strictly a Government war, which Government wages for its life; and, therefore, a war not to be opposed without enmity to the Government—which means treason. In other wars, the President and two-thirds of the Senate may, at any time, make peace. In this war, neither the Executive branch, nor the Legislative branch, nor the Judicial branch, nor all combined, have the slightest power to release the people of the Confederate States from their obligations to the National Constitution, which is declared to be "the supreme law of the land." These departments of the Government are all sworn to protect and defend that "supreme law." Congress and the President have simply discharged the obligations of their oath in raising and sending armies with which to put down resistance to the [illegible]

[illegible] questions of expediency. It happens, [illegible] Boston. [illegible] is constantly hale among the people of the rebel population. To oppose the war, then, is to oppose the Constitution which necessitates the war; and, in strict justice, should put the man who does it into the category of traitors.

The word Peace does not belong to the day. It should be tabooed, and not uttered again until one of two occasions, either when the Government regains its power, or when it yields its life—either at its feet, or over its grave.

A CONFEDERATE PLENIPOTENTIARY.—JOHN VAN BUREN assures the country, on his personal responsibility, that if President LINCOLN will grant the rebels an armistice, they will go home and elect Members to Congress, and thus save themselves from the operation of his Proclamation. This is an important suggestion. If it rests on good authority, it deserves attention;—nay, we do not hesitate to say, that the President ought at once to do what is asked at his hands.

Will not Mr. VAN BUREN then let the country understand on what authority he makes this important announcement? Has he not a letter from JEFFERSON DAVIS in his pocket—given to him as an autograph or souvenir,—which gives him warrant for such a declaration? If so, let him produce it. The country, and JEFF. DAVIS, will both excuse any apparent breach of confidence which its publication might imply. The end will certainly justify such a trifling departure from etiquette. We presume that Mr. DAVIS, when he gave him the letter, did not request him not to publish it,—and as it relates to a public matter of vast importance, he would be perfectly justified in doing so.

We do not, to be sure, quite see the necessity of an armistice in order to enable the people of the South to vote. We voted here last week without an armistice, and Mr. VAN BUREN cannot complain of the result, whatever some of the rest of us may think about it. If the South are anxious to vote on the question, they will probably find some mode of doing it without a suspension of arms. Or if they want an armistice they will probably ask for it. When they do, we presume President LINCOLN will grant their request. But, unless Mr. VAN BUREN can show some credentials which give authority to the suggestion he has made, we fear the President will not feel at liberty to grant the armistice for which he applies.

MCCLELLAN AND BURNSIDE.—Gen. MCCLELLAN'S brief farewell address to the Army of the Potomac is as exceedingly neat and effective, and thoroughly loyal and soldierly document. His address of over a year ago, on assuming the command he has now laid down, will be remembered as possessed of the same characteristics, though it was somewhat more enthusiastic in tone, and promised quick and decisive results, for which the people have waited long and patiently. The reports, bulletins, and dispatches with which he has favored the public during the period of his command have been very few and very brief; and were it not for the correspondents of the Press, the country and the world would have known very little of the battles and campaigns he has fought and planned. But of this touching adieu, every line does him honor.

Gen. BURNSIDE'S address on assuming command, which we give yesterday, is also characterized by its brevity and soldierly character. The new commander makes no specific promises: Patriotism, energy and the Divine blessing will, he believes, insure success, and he closes with the "steadfast assurance that the just cause must prevail." Though BURNSIDE promises and predicts nothing, however, he [illegible] quick and decisive [illegible]

The old General and the new each speak in a friendly and [illegible] of the other. Gen. BURNSIDE, in his address, says that he is "fully identified with the soldiers, in their feelings of respect and esteem for Gen. MCCLELLAN, entertained through a long and most friendly association with him." And Gen. MCCLELLAN, in the few words he addressed verbally to the troops, at Warrenton Junction, yesterday, said: "I wish you to stand by BURNSIDE, as you have stood by me, and all will be well." The spirit of these two loyal officers is the spirit we desire to see exhibited by all admirers of both the old commander and the new.

GRISLY LAUGHTER.—If wit is the "conjunction of opposite ideas," then certainly the brightest scintillations of wit which fell from the lips of JOHN VAN BUREN, professed wit as he is, at the meeting of the Young Men's Democratic Union Association on Monday evening, must pale and grow dim before the brightness of that flash which broke from the lips of the individual, who in the midst of JOHN'S remarks about Honest ARABIAN FLAGG, &c., flashed forth the ejaculation "Honest FERNANDO WOOD!" The audience were not slow to perceive the point of the remark, and "great laughter" broke out all over the room. The ideas were felt to be not only opposite but incompatible.

But what a commentary upon the audience that they had heard with great applause, and had made prominent among themselves the very man whose name could not be coupled with the term "honest" without provoking "great laughter" from a favoring audience. It was a laughable, and at the same time a most melancholy spectacle, when we consider that the character of those whom a people or a party delights to honor, is a sure guide to the character of the people or the party itself.

FROM FORTRESS MONROE.

An Arrival from the Gulf Ports.

FORTRESS MONROE, Tuesday, Nov. 10.

The mail steamer Rhode Island arrived from the Gulf to-day, and reports "all quiet" at New-Orleans, Hilton Head and Mobile. She brings a large mail, but no news.

The Monitor came up Hampton Roads to-day at noon.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

WAR DEPARTMENT.

Orders Relating to Railroad Operations.

WAR DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. [illegible]—[illegible] corps of troops along the United States military railroads, will give all facilities to the officers of the roads and the Quartermasters for loading and unloading cars, so as to prevent any delay. On arrival at the depots, whether in the day or night, the cars will be immediately unloaded, and working parties will always be in readiness for that duty, and authorized to unload the whole train at once. Commanding officers will be charged with guarding the track, siding, wood, water tanks, etc., within their several commands, and will be held responsible for the result. Any military officer who shall neglect his duty in this respect, will be reported by the Quartermasters and officers of the railroad, and his name will be stricken from the rolls of the army.

Depots will be established at suitable points, under the direction of the Commanding General, and properly guarded. No officer, whatever may be his rank, will interfere with the running of the cars, as directed by the Superintendent of the road. Any one who by interference will be dismissed from the service for disobedience of orders.

By order of the Secretary of War.

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Orders Relating to the Finding of the Military Commission in the Harper's Ferry Case.

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE, WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.

GENERAL ORDERS, No. 185.—1st. The Military Commission, of which Major-Gen. DAVID HUNTER, U. S. Volunteers, is President, appointed to meet in the City of Washington on the 26th of September, pursuant to Special Order No. 224, of Sept. 25, 1862, to investigate the circumstances of the abandonment of Maryland Heights, and the surrender of Harper's Ferry, have reported that Col. THOMAS H. FORD, of the Third Ohio Volunteers, commanding the defenses of Maryland Heights without ability, abandoned his position without sufficient cause, and has shown throughout such a lack of military capacity as to disqualify him, in the estimation of the Commission, for a command in the service. That said Col. THOMAS H. FORD is by direction of the President dismissed from the service of the United States.

2. The Commission having reported that the behavior of the One Hundred and Twenty-six New-York Infantry was disgraceful, and that Major WILLIAM H. BEAMS, for his bad conduct, ought to be dismissed, the said Major BEAMS, of the One Hundred and Twenty-sixth New-York Volunteers, is by direction of the President, dismissed from the service of the United States.

3. The Commission having reported that Brig.-Gen. JULIUS WHITE, United States Volunteers, acted with decided capability and courage, and merits his approbation, and having found nothing in the conduct of the subordinate officers brought before the Commission, are released from arrest, and will report for duty.

4. The Military Commission, of which Major-Gen. HUNTER is President, is dissolved.

By order of the Secretary of War.

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Nov. 11.

GEN. M'CLELLAN.

Gen. MCCLELLAN and half a dozen members of his Staff, passed through the city this afternoon, connecting directly with the 5 o'clock train on route for Trenton. Gen. BURNS went by the same train to New-York. At Warrenton Junction and other points on the road, the General bid an affectionate farewell to his troops, remarking on one occasion that it was hard for him to part. It is reported that a number of officers have tendered their resignations, but they will probably find themselves dishonorably dropped from the rolls.

THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER TO GEN. M'CLELLAN.

It is understood that the President has furnished a copy of his letter to Gen. MCCLELLAN, and on which MCCLELLAN filled up not, to Gen. BURNSIDE, for the consideration and guidance of that officer. The President has also read this letter to various parties, and it will no doubt be given to the public. It is a document which will elevate Mr. LINCOLN, in the estimation of all thoughtful men, and will show conclusively that he has not been content with the nominal position of Commander-in-Chief, but has studied the great principles underlying the conduct of military affairs.

NOT A PARALLEL CASE.

The statement in a contemporary, given as a justification for Gen. MCCLELLAN'S late movements, to the effect that Gen. HALLECK had commenced a whole Winter in the works which finally compelled BEAUREGARD to evacuate the strongholds of Corinth, is inconsistent with facts. Not a National soldier was within two hundred miles of Corinth until toward the middle of March, and HALLECK did not arrive there until the middle of April. Before the end of May the Union flag waved over the great rebel strongholds of the Southwest.

GEN. HALLECK TO VISIT THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

Gen. HALLECK, it is said, will visit the Army of the Potomac on a tour of inspection, and to consult with Gen. BURNSIDE, immediately.

THE DEPARTMENT OF THE SOUTH.

Medical Director CHASE reports from Hilton Head, that in his judgment it would be extremely inexpedient to subject unacclimated troops to the dangers of yellow fever in the Department of the South, until after a severe frost shall have purged the atmosphere. This strong opinion will probably cause some little delay in the sailing of Gen. HUNTER'S command.

PROMOTION OF GEN. AUGUR.

Brig.-Gen. AUGUR will be commissioned Major-General to-morrow, for gallant conduct during Pope's Virginia campaign, and especially for services in Cedar Mountain, where he was severely wounded. Gen. AUGUR has proved a valuable officer. He and Brig.-Gen. AMES have been ordered to report to Gen. BANKS.

IN COMMAND OF BALTIMORE.

Gen. MORSE will be in command at Baltimore until Gen. SCHENCK is sufficiently recovered.

THE WASHINGTON FORTIFICATIONS.

The Committee on Fortifications have appointed Gens. CULLUM and BARNARD, of the Engineers, and BAKER, of the Artillery, a Sub-Committee for minutely inspecting and reporting upon the various works and lines of defence around this city. These officers have already examined twenty-six of our defensive [illegible]

THE CONTRABAND INDEMNITY.

A dispatch was received last night from Gen. Pope, giving the names of three hundred Indians commissioned to be hung, and requesting an approval of the contraband sentence. It was replied to by the President, that only the ringleaders shall be executed, and asking for a copy of the evidence.

TROOPS REPORTED FOR DUTY.

Since the commencement of the rebellion nearly [illegible] troops have reported themselves for duty in this city. These figures do not include the three months' men.

SMUGGLING GOODS ACROSS THE LINES.

William B. Brown, a Baltimorean, was caught this morning in the act of conveying a quantity of goods South. He refused to take the oath of allegiance. Mal. Boone furnished him with lodgings in the Old Capitol Prison, where he will have an opportunity to reflect upon the risks and uncertainties of the smuggling trade.

PRISONERS SENT IN.

The following prisoners were sent in to-day, by Col. Simmons, Provost-Marshal of the Eleventh Army Corps, and committed to the usual receptacle for rebel prisoners—the Old Capitol Prison:

Charles E. Cogan, Seventeenth Virginia; Wm. M. Davis, do.; Frederick Ephardt, do.; John N. Brady, do.; Thos. S. Palmer, First Virginia Cavalry; J. F. Gabel, do.; Jas. W. Riley and L. D. Hall, Col. Richardson's Virginia Conscript Regiment.

A man named H. W. Seymour, an agent of the rebel Government, who was captured near Warrenton, was also sent in with the batch. Seymour is a Louisianian, and lost in some way or another connected with the escape of troops from that State.

ARRIVAL OF MORE PRISONERS.

Another batch of rebel prisoners of war was sent in this evening from Gen. Sullivan' headquarters, near Harrisonburg. Their names are as follows:

William H. Daniels, Alexander Dinsly, John L. French, Isaac Kirom, Thirteenth Virginia Cavalry; Wm. C. Jones, Twenty-first Georgia; Corp. G. A. Tyson, Sixteenth North Carolina; Sergt. Major G. R. Tyson, Sixteenth Virginia; H. L. Cook, Merritt Knight, Twenty-first Georgia; David Moore, Eighteenth North Carolina; G. H. Lowrie, Sixteenth Virginia; J. H. Smith, Twelfth South Carolina; J. M. Blackbird, C. J. Wooley, Sixteenth North Carolina; J. M. Harvey, J. W. Sexton, Thirty-fourth North Carolina; J. P. Leasley, Thirty-sixth North Carolina; J. D. Etheridge, Fifty-first Georgia; George Pulslagle, Thirty-fourth North Carolina.

The following prisoners of State were also sent in:

Garrett Payne, Zeph. Wells, Olmsted Crosslin, Warren Crosslin, Wesley Crosslin, John T. Green, Duncan Spinks, John S. Bickler, M. V. Ritchie, Jas. W. Wilkins, and John M. Butler.

They were all sent to the Old Capitol Prison.

RETURNING TO THEIR ALLEGIANCE.

Jesse H. Lockman and Rawson Rouse were arrested near Alexandria, yesterday morning, while trying to make their way through our lines into Alexandria. They continued to having formerly belonged to a rebel regiment, raised in the latter place, but professed to be tired of the war, and anxious to take the oath of allegiance. They were brought before Major Doane, who committed them to the Old Capitol, until their cases can be investigated.

A RECREREE SURGEON.

Dr. Moran, a Surgeon in the volunteer service, was arrested to-day, by order of Gen. Wadsworth, and sent to the Old Capitol Prison, for being found lying drunk in the streets.

ARRIVALS.

Hon. Edward Haight and Rev. Dr. Tyng, of New-York, arrived here to-day.

TO THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Nov. 11.

NO DIVISIONS IN THE CABINET.

The Agent of the Associated Press is authorized by the Secretary of State and Secretary of the Treasury to say that the reports of Cabinet dissensions upon the measures of the Administration, which have gained currency, are altogether groundless.

THE TAX ON ADVERTISEMENTS.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has decided, in regard to the tax on advertisements, that the last proviso of section 68 of the Excise law exempts a newspaper whose circulation does not exceed two thousand copies, from all taxes on advertisements, and the last proviso but one of the same section exempts the receipts for advertisements to the amount of $1,500; consequently they will be assessed only on the excess over the $1,500, and then only when their whole circulation exceeds two thousand copies.

NAVAL ORDERS.

Acting Volunteer Lieut. Eaton has been ordered to the Connecticut, Acting Asst. Paymaster C. G. Herreman to the steamer Commodore Morris, and Acting Volunteer Surgeon Lovelly to the Brandywine.

Notes on Chronic Diseases.

BY DR. A. WOLF, NO. 583 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

No. 4—Epilepsy.

As I promised in my last, my present communication will be devoted to a description of a malady but too often witnessed in this country, and known as Epilepsy, or Falling Sickness.

This is a peculiar form of Convulsive Disease, returning at uncertain and irregular intervals. There is loss of sense and voluntary motion, and the attacks come on suddenly and unexpectedly, sometimes without any premonitory symptoms, although, on the other hand, they are often preceded by some nervous twitching or other peculiar sensation. During the duration of the paroxysm, in which the convulsions of the general system are often fearful to behold, there is foaming at the mouth, and subsequently the patient often falls into a profound sleep. Epileptic fits usually affect those of adult age, and rarely attack those of tender years. Any constitutional irritation, or great temporary excitement, may induce Epilepsy. Diseases of the brain and its coverings also give rise to it, and when once instituted, the fits may be expected to recur with more or less frequency.

Many and serious are the mistakes which are daily committed by physicians in general practice in confounding Epilepsy with Hysteria or Apoplexy. Such never can occur when treated by one who embraces it as his specialty for chronic diseases, which I have been long and assiduously devoted to. My method of cure is simple, and scientifically based on the sound principles of modern medicine, and the results rapidly prove that it is the most speedy and certain at present known to our profession.

Notes on Dyspepsia will be given in my next.

A. WOLF, (de Paris,) M. D.,
Physician for Chronic Diseases, No. 583 Broadway.

NOTE.—Dr. A. Wolf devotes his exclusive attention to the treatment of chronic diseases. He can be consulted personally or by letter from 7 to 10 A. M., 1 to 3 P. M., daily.

SUMMARIES OF THOUGHT
BY C. S. DOVER.
In two volumes, 16mo, elegantly printed and elegantly bound. Price $2.
These volumes exhibit the peculiarity in the art of composition, presenting each paragraph, and often each sentence, complete within itself, and yet connected more or less intimately, where the subjects are kindred, with what precedes and follows it. Added to this, the writer stops always at the point of suggestion.

THE NEW AMERICAN CYCLOPÆDIA.
PUBLISHER'S NOTICE.
The 16th and concluding volume of the NEW AMERICAN CYCLOPÆDIA being now at press and shortly to be published, it is proper to state that after the publication and delivery to subscribers of that volume the price will be advanced to cents per volume to all future subscribers. This increased price is rendered necessary by reason of the advance of paper and materials in the manufacture of the work, as also by the very great expense of the literary labor, much exceeding the estimate made when we first issued our terms to subscribers, five years since. We have faithfully kept to our engagements, giving to the subscribers more than we promised, and we trust those who fail to procure the work during its progress will not regard the increased price as unreasonable.
THE PRESENT PRICE OF THE CYCLOPÆDIA,
IN THE VARIOUS STYLES OF BINDING:

CENTRAL OFFICE, SANITARY COMMISSION.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 2, 1862.

The Sanitary Commission, at the request of Gen. McClellan, most earnestly advises against the transport of sundry articles to soldiers of articles which it is supposed will add to the inconvenience of their campaigns. To the inconvenience the Commission many hundred tons already sent are now piled uselessly in Alexandria and vicinity, and upon old camp-grounds, while thousands of them probably have destroyed, from their falling into the hands of the enemy, and yet a small part of all that have been received by those to whom they were addressed have been of the smallest value to them, except as tokens of the affection of their friends. For this purpose, letters and such other small and light articles can be transmitted by mail, would have been much better. Larger gifts occasion serious practical mischief—men and officers being naturally averse to throwing away what they have cost the donors, or what are a chief cause of the anxiety for their safety and thus of the sickness of the soldier. Volunteers, when universally, until they learn better by dearbought experience, undertake to carry an excessive amount of clothing. To this cause, and to the excessive baggage of officers, is owing that the march of our Union forces in the present war are attributed by the highest military authority. But even when successful in carrying the attempt to secure comfort by the possession of an unusual amount of clothing is nearly always frustrated; the heavier baggage is soon thrown away at the first, long-continued march, while the lighter one is retained, and the long and heavily-loaded wagon trains being cut off, when the light and shorter one is captured. Similar observations apply to regimental hospitals. The hospital of a regiment in the field should be supplied with only just the bare necessaries needed for the temporary treatment of the sick, who, in all serious cases, are removed as fast as possible to general hospitals, where the supplies of the regiment are not available. An excessive amount of regimental hospital stores and conveniences is a serious evil, by the sickness and fatigue of the frequent detention and separation from the regiment of the few articles essential to the usefulness of the surgeon. The Commission, at least from the first, protested against a common error of Surgeons in this respect as well as against the greater evil of the common attempt of the volunteer soldiers to carry into the field too many of the means of comfort to which they are habituated at home. In accordance with the request of the Commission, their data appear to understand, to their, by whom such articles are contributed, to their, by whom such articles are contributed, and instructed.

FRED. LAW OLMSTED, General Secretary.

FOR THE SICK AND WOUNDED.

Under an order from the President of the United States a national system has been established by the Sanitary Commission for the free transportation and judicious distribution of articles contributed by the people for the sick and wounded of the Army and Navy. The expense, afterwards well tried, has been found very small. The system has been approved by the Secretary of War, the Commander-in-Chief and the Surgeon-General. The sanitary of other animal transportation is practically free, but their contributions are delivered in the hospitals, where they are generally year from the control of the Commission. Of more than a million articles sent through one of the largest of its channels of supply, it has been distinctly ascertained, on unexpected and unanimously, that it was unhappily employed in visiting all divisions of the army, including those on the Southern coast, the Mississippi, and the western frontier, to observe great, whether in these supplies where they are needed most. The Commission, therefore, is reluctantly in the river articles to individuals, and declines to receive contributions with any restriction, as to their destination within the limits of the force employed in the service of the Nation, it being one of its secondary objects to strengthen the sentiment of National unity whenever it can oppose its connection with State or local pride. The distribution of hospital supplies is but a branch of the work of the Commission. Examples of the best professional talent which can be obtained in the country to aid its larger purpose—to do all that is possible for the health and vigor of our fighting men, to lighten their burden, and to sustain their spirits under the privations and hardships which are an essential part of successful warfare. For the purpose contributions to the treasury are solicited. They may be addressed to the treasurer, Mr. T. STRONG, Esq., No. 68 Wall-st., New-York.

Commission consider appointment from the President of the United States: Rev. Henry W. Bellows, D. D.; Prof. A. D. Bache, LL. D.; George W. Cullum, U. S. A.; Alexander E. Maynard, M. D.; Rev. Robert C. Wood, M. D.; U. S. A.; William H. Van Buren, M. D.; Wolcott Gibbs, M. D.; Samuel W. Howe, M. D.; Cornelius R. Agnew, M. D.; Elisha Harris, M. D.; A. S. Newberry, M. D.; Geo. C. Shattuck, Hon. Simeon E. Baldwin, Rev. Thos. H. Clark, D. D.; Hon. Joseph Holt, LL. D.; Hon. Benj. R. Curtis, Hon. Mark Skinner, Frederick Law Olmsted.

Contributions of suitable supplies for the sick and wounded will be received at the rooms of the Woman's Central Relief Association, No. 10 Bond-st., Cooper Union, New-York. For further information apply in New-York at the local office of the Commission, No. 425 Broadway, or by mail to FRED. LAW OLMSTED, General Secretary, Washington.

GRAND DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL SOIREE AT IRVING HALL, WEDNESDAY EVENING, Nov. 12.

Miss NINA FOSTER will give an entertainment to the Musical and Dramatic Connoisseurs of this City, consisting in addition to her [illegible] "The Shadow Song," from Dinorah, Meyerbeer's latest work, sheets to be produced at the Academy; also "TACCA LA NOTTE," from TROVATORE, sung by Mr. FARNHAM, the celebrated Soprano, who last Summer made such a successful debut in Newport under Signor SARILI.

A new operatic Romance, by the recent brilliant debutant, the Young CASTLE, accompanied by his distinguished Signor ABELLA.

Two of his most original compositions, by the distinguished native Pianist, HARRY SANDERSON.

Two exquisite Bacchanalian duets, secretly and simple themes, by the celebrated violinist, THEODORE THOMAS.

In addition to the attractions contributed by these eminent artists, Miss FOSTER will herself appear in three of the first dramatic personations which have rewarded her fame upon the stage of SALOON THEATRICALS, viz.:

1. THE PARESIASUS of M. P. WILLIS.
2. "JULIET," in several of its most exquisite scenes.
3. The famous "Scolding Scene" in the SCHOOL FOR SCANDAL. Miss FOSTER will personate the parts of Sir PETER and of Lady TEAZLE, effecting, without the aid of costumes, the perfect individualization of the widely different characters with a success which has won repeated encomiums from the first of New-York and Boston critics.

Tickets to be found at Irving Hall during the week and on the evening of the Soirée.

The performance will commence at 8 P. M. precisely.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Key West, Fla., Monday, Nov. 3, 1862.

By the arrival of the United States steamer Kingfisher from Apalachicola and Cedar Keys, Fla., we learn that several letters have escaped from the former place and taken refuge in the blockading vessel in that harbor. One of these had given warning which we have not heard, that we were expected to return the last of this month, and early in December all the accumulated business will of course be dispatched. The Prize Commissioners are actively investigating all the cases, and will be fully prepared with all the documents.

The following war vessels are now in port: U. S. steamer St. Lawrence, Capt. Swasey, (Flag-ship;) U. S. steamer Magnolia, Lieut.-Commanding Rhoades; U. S. steamer Sagamore, Lieut.-Commanding Semmes; U. S. steamer Kingfisher, Lieut.-Commanding Greene; U. S. steamer Fort Royal, Capt. Monsell; U. S. steamer Rhode Island, Capt. Farquhar, (just arrived;) U. S. schooner Samuel Rotan, U. S. bark James L. Davis. F.

NEWS FROM FORTRESS MONROE.

Gen. Banks' Expedition—Is Texas Its Destination?—Yorktown—Why not March on Richmond by the Peninsula or James River?

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

Fortress Monroe, Sunday, Nov. 2, 1862.

Within little more than one year we have seen depart from this point three important Southern Expeditions, and if we are to believe all we hear and see, we are about to witness the departure of the fourth.

First came the Sherman Expedition, which, with unequaled mysteriousness sailed out of the Roads on the 19th of October. On the 12th of January followed the overslaught Burnside Expedition; and, later, came Gen. Reynes's Ship Island Expedition. Previous to all of these, was however the completely successful expedition more properly Commodore Stringham's, which electrified the country by the capture of Hatteras—a naval display which, as a whole, has not since been excelled.

The expedition next to sail, and of which the Spaulding, with the Twenty-ninth Maine Regiment, is the forerunner, is reported to be that which Major-Gen. Banks will command, the destination of which is commonly supposed to be Galveston Bay. I do not know as there has been any attempt or wish to keep the matter a secret. Taking the history of the Sherman and Burnside Expeditions as examples, we may safely conclude that it will be weeks, months even, before Gen. Banks will pass out of the Capes. But there are reasons that lead me to believe that, while the Expedition will not sail immediately, there will be no such extraordinary delay as attended the movements of the two expeditions referred to. We find reason enough for this conclusion in Gen. Banks himself; and this I say with no intention to reflect on the heads of his predecessor expeditionists. The reminding reasons why I conclude there will be no such extraordinary delay, may not be well to relate. Enough to know there is every reason for believing that Gen. Banks will depart at the appointed time—be that next week or next month. It may be remarked that the season, a month hence, will be quite as propitious for landing Northern troops in an extreme Southern latitude as now.

But is the destination an extreme Southern one? Is it Galveston Bay or some other Southern port? Is it, indeed, in the South at all? There appears to be willingness enough to have this become the current belief to create the shadow of a suspicion as to the port of destination.

I cannot resist remarking on the confidence felt by every one in Gen. Banks, who, after all, should scarcely wish to exchange his reputation for that of any other General. It is true he has not had a brilliant career; but he has done all things well; and whether it was as little more than wagon-master to a Government train, or in executing a skillful retreat with a handful of men, he did his duty, and uttered no complaint. The country has not failed to take his measure, and compare him justly with others, not excepting those who, with far less to complain of, did little less than throw up their commands in the face of the enemy. The country will regard, hopefully, the expedition which the Government has had the wisdom to confide to Gen. Banks.

Maj.-Gen. Keyes came down from Yorktown yesterday, and proceeded to Washington by the evening boat. Not a few have thought it a little singular that this experienced officer has been not one side at a time when his country needs the services of all, especially the most active and capable of her Generals. Walls Gen. Keyes' command is respectable, and the field in which he has been left of no inconsiderable importance, yet were his force increased he could, and if not restrained by orders, would play a very important part in the present game for Richmond.

It is to be presumed that the Government knows what it is about, however some may be disposed to contend that certain things argue the contrary. Nevertheless, one may be permitted, without pretense to superior sagacity, to have the opinion that the true play, as the men on the board now stand, (that is, if Richmond is the prize,) is to launch a force up the Peninsula. Twenty thousand men started up the James, handled energetically and skillfully, if the force did not in four days knock at the gates of Richmond, would, on the principle of counter irritation, (as President Lincoln would say,) have the effect to withdraw a large force, probably not much less than twice its numbers, from the main rebel army confronting McClellan. Two men assailing one, so that he can give but one hand to either, certainly place him at a disadvantage. There are Generals, and, I believe, among them as good as we have, who contend that the Peninsula, or James River route, is the only one by which Richmond can be reached. It has the advantage of rendering the joint efforts of the army and navy practicable. None other has.

Certain things do seem a little strange, and not the least strange of them all is the fact, that while the rebels have massed almost their entire force, and placed all their hopes on its ability to maintain itself—literally put all their eggs into one basket—the strangest thing is, that we, by massing the Federal force, do not overpower the enemy, and crush his eggs, instead of scattering our force, dividing it into numerous small armies, for special purposes or no purpose at all. Whenever we have been beaten, there has been one story,—the rebels had the most men. We have lost, nobody knows how many battles, from this cause. Last Spring the rebels abandoned sundry points which they had been holding at the expense of dividing their force, and consolidated it in one grand army for the defense of Richmond, the holding or taking of which virtually became some time ago the fate of the rebellion.

With that army they have beaten us every time, and, doubtless, feel themselves able to do so again. What do we do? Confessedly we have scattered over the country at the present time twice as many men as the rebel army under Lee numbers, or can number, for the defence of Richmond. Can it be doubted that our force collected, and used with ordinary skill, it would form a grand army that could march over the rebel army and "on Richmond?" and can it be questioned what would be the effect of such an event, or the wisdom of such a policy?

Would 30,000 men, well clothed, drilled and officered, quite as well as a large proportion of his present army, be a valuable reinforcement to Gen. McClellan at the present time? At least as many as 30,000 are now encamped—the Secretary of War and Gen. Halleck know where—where one-fifth as many would do just as well—where there are not 5,000 rebels within twenty-five miles, and they scared and on the defensive. Why are these troops thrown away—put to building Winter quarters, kept from active service, when they might improve the grand army in Virginia, or, better still, constitute the bulk of a sufficient force for the Peninsular campaign just spoken of.

If Gen. McClellan fails because of the superior force of the enemy—if we are to see another Chickahominy chapter because of not enough men, the country will vindicate him there is not enough men, the country will vindicate and there are now within the scope of a few miles 30,000 troops engaged in nothing more valuable than building Winter quarters, while as many more are being sent on an expedition two thousand miles distant. What Napoleon had, whatever brilliant the genius of Gen. McClellan may be, the reflection will be no more by a great deal than twice which Richmond taken, the grand rebel army beaten, there would be little question for the Winter quarters.

With the disorganization of the force to be commanded by Gen. Banks, with the idea here referred to, and the whole marching on Richmond by the Peninsula route, while McClellan's army presses down on the route by which it is already so well advanced, doubt any one doubt the result? And, I ask, how can our troops be used to better advantage?

When so much may be done, why should Gen. Keyes be kept at Yorktown, his force idly on the defensive, while a much larger force, within call, is employed to even less purpose? Good, some entered a plea in behalf of consolidating these forces under the General, to cooperate with Gen. McClellan in giving the final blow to the rebellion in the capture of Richmond. RODERICK.

INTERESTING FROM PORT ROYAL.

Abatement of the Yellow Fever—Bilious Fevers and Dysentery Prevailing—Speculations as to the Next Commander of the Department, &c.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

Port Royal, S. C., Wednesday, Nov. 5, 1862.

The United States steamer Rhode Island stops here on her way Northward, and I take advantage of the few moments before the closing of the mails to write a few lines—indeed there is not sufficient occurring here at present to form the substance of a long letter.

The weather here since my last has been very favorable to health. Only one or two more cases of yellow fever have made their appearance. One fears on that score it has abated, and we all breathe freer, as having narrowly escaped a very dreadful epidemic. Although Yellow Jack has shrunk before the vigorous blasts of a freezing north and northeasterly wind, still bilious and congestive fevers are common, and with regiments placed in particularly unhealthy localities the cases are numerous. The Seventy-sixth and Ninety-seventh Pennsylvania Regiments have both suffered severely, the Ninety-seventh having over 200 on the sick list from fever and dysentery.

This strange visitation of an epidemic has made a wonderful change, in the short space of a week—a change so sudden and so complete that it is scarcely realized. The sudden removal of Gen. Mitchell, of Col. Brown, of Capt. Wainwright, of Capt. Williams, and several others, all prominent officers, has changed the course of events here materially. Speculation is rife as to who will be our next commander. Many names are mentioned, but none more frequently, I have noticed, than that of Maj.-Gen. Wright. Gen. Wright was here with Gen. Sherman, and he seems to have then won the confidence and love of all the soldiery here; so much so that Wright's name is almost sure to be the one mentioned when asked whom they would like to see in command here. It is to be hoped that the Government will send an energetic and capable man here—one who will accomplish something. Evidently this and other places along the coast, but more especially this place, will be the scene of active operations during the Winter, and while the Army of the Potomac remains inactive in Winter quarters.

The rebels had a healthy dread of Mitchell, as I manifested in the late Southern papers received, wherein the people of Savannah and Charleston are exhorted, in the most strenuous terms, to make every preparation for defence, as they must expect soon an attack from Mitchell, who will not remain long inactive. Gen. Brannan, at present temporarily in command of the post, issues the following General Order, as a mark of respect to the memory of Gen. Mitchell and the other officers who were, with him, victims to the fatal fever.

I am happy to be able to state that Gen. Mitchell's two sons, and Capt. J. J. Elwell, Quartermaster at this post, who have been suffering from the fever, are now reported out of danger, and near recovery.

Headquarters Department of the South, Hilton Head, Port Royal, S. C., Nov. 3, 1862.

General Orders No. 80.—It is the painful duty of the Commanding General to announce to the Tenth Army Corps, the decease of their late companions in arms:

Col. Nathaniel W. Brown, Third Regiment Rhode Island Artillery, (Chief of Artillery,) on the 30th of October, 1862.

Capt. L. A. Warfield, Commissary of Subsistence, (Depot Commissary, Port Royal,) on the 29th of October, 1862.

Capt. J. C. Williams, A. D. C., (Staff of the late Major-Gen. Mitchell,) on the 29th of October, 1862.

Who have fallen victims to the epidemic prevailing amongst us.

Col. Brown, since his command of the Third Rhode Island Artillery, had, by his military ability and excellent discipline, brought that regiment to a state of efficiency, rendering it equal, perhaps, to any in the corps.

Capt. L. A. Warfield was a faithful and efficient staff officer, and his great business capacity rendered him peculiarly fitted for the position he held with such credit to himself, and service to the Government.

Capt. J. C. Williams, A. D. C., served as Lieutenant and Aid-de-Camp on the Staff of Gen. Mitchell, during his entire campaign in the West, and though but quite a young man, had already distinguished himself as a gallant and efficient officer, and was much beloved by his companions for his many good qualities of heart and mind.

In the death of these officers the Government loses three faithful and devoted servants, the army some of its most efficient staff officers; and while we who are left mourn the death of those who in life were our esteemed companions, let us look back on their many excellent qualities, and hope that in our loss they have gained. By order of

Brig.-Gen. J. M. BRANNAN.

Arrival There of Gen. Rosecrans and Staff—The Late Rebel Demonstration Against the Place, &c.

Nashville, Tuesday, Nov. 11.

Gen. Rosecrans and Staff arrived last night, having left Bowling Green at 6 that morning, on train to Mitchellville, making the remainder of the trip, forty miles, on horseback, without interruption by guerrillas.

The forests are blazing along the greater portion of the route, and many dwellings have been destroyed. The country looks painfully desolate. Inhabitants, forage and stock nearly all gone.

The reports about the starving situation of Mitchellville were fanciful. About 30,000 bushels corn and other substantials were in store when McCook's corps arrived.

The recent attack of the enemy was a reconnoissance, and a feint to enable Morgan's guerrillas to destroy the railroad bridge.

We lost about thirty killed and wounded in the attack.

McCook has driven most of the rebel guerrillas clear back from the city.

The enemy is still in considerable force at Murfreesboro, but they are retreating as rapidly as possible beyond the Tennessee River, destroying everything as they retire.

A supply train of a hundred wagons arrived from Mitchellville last night. Gen. Rosecrans occupies the old headquarters of Buell.

Capture of a Steamer Laden with Arms.

Baltimore, Tuesday, Nov. 11.

A letter from a son of Mr. Fulton, editor of the Baltimore American, dated Pensacola, on board the Hartford, Oct. 29, says that the United States steamer Montgomery, chase in this morning with a fine side-wheel steamer as a prize, loaded with arms and munitions of war, which she caught about forty miles off Mobile, after a chase of seven hours. She was originally called the Texas, but was changed to the Caroline. She was commanded by Capt. Fyenne, of New-Orleans, formerly commanding the rebel steamer Oreto, which is now in port, in charge of Prize-Master Lieut. Commanding Wainwright. The Montgomery had left Ship Island on the morning of the 24th, and had been cruising in search of the Oreto, which was expected to return the last of this month, and early in December all the accumulated business will of course be dispatched. The Prize Commissioners are actively investigating all the cases, and will be fully prepared with all the documents.

The following war vessels are now in port: U. S. steamer St. Lawrence, Capt. Swasey, (Flag-ship;) U. S. steamer Magnolia, Lieut.-Commanding Rhoades; U. S. steamer Sagamore, Lieut.-Commanding Semmes; U. S. steamer Kingfisher, Lieut.-Commanding Greene; U. S. steamer Fort Royal, Capt. Monsell; U. S. steamer Rhode Island, Capt. NEWS FROM FORTRESS MONROE.

Gen. Banks' Expedition—Is Texas Its Destination?—Yorktown—Why not March on Richmond by the Peninsula or James River?

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

Fortress Monroe, Sunday, Nov. 2, 1862.

Within little more than one year we have seen depart from this point three important Southern Expeditions, and if we are to believe all we hear and see, we are about to witness the departure of the fourth.

First came the Sherman Expedition, which, with unequaled mysteriousness sailed out of the Roads on the 19th of October. On the 12th of January followed the overslaught Burnside Expedition; and, later, came Gen. Reynes's Ship Island Expedition. Previous to all of these, was however the completely successful expedition more properly Commodore Stringham's, which electrified the country by the capture of Hatteras—a naval display which, as a whole, has not since been excelled.

The expedition next to sail, and of which the Spaulding, with the Twenty-ninth Maine Regiment, is the forerunner, is reported to be that which Major-Gen. Banks will command, the destination of which is commonly supposed to be Galveston Bay. I do not know as there has been any attempt or wish to keep the matter a secret. Taking the history of the Sherman and Burnside Expeditions as examples, we may safely conclude that it will be weeks, months even, before Gen. Banks will pass out of the Capes. But there are reasons that lead me to believe that, while the Expedition will not sail immediately, there will be no such extraordinary delay as attended the movements of the two expeditions referred to. We find reason enough for this conclusion in Gen. Banks himself; and this I say with no intention to reflect on the heads of his predecessor expeditionists. The reminding reasons why I conclude there will be no such extraordinary delay, may not be well to relate. Enough to know there is every reason for believing that Gen. Banks will depart at the appointed time—be that next week or next month. It may be remarked that the season, a month hence, will be quite as propitious for landing Northern troops in an extreme Southern latitude as now.

But is the destination an extreme Southern one? Is it Galveston Bay or some other Southern port? Is it, indeed, in the South at all? There appears to be willingness enough to have this become the current belief to create the shadow of a suspicion as to the port of destination.

I cannot resist remarking on the confidence felt by every one in Gen. Banks, who, after all, should scarcely wish to exchange his reputation for that of any other General. It is true he has not had a brilliant career; but he has done all things well; and whether it was as little more than wagon-master to a Government train, or in executing a skillful retreat with a handful of men, he did his duty, and uttered no complaint. The country has not failed to take his measure, and compare him justly with others, not excepting those who, with far less to complain of, did little less than throw up their commands in the face of the enemy. The country will regard, hopefully, the expedition which the Government has had the wisdom to confide to Gen. Banks.

Maj.-Gen. Keyes came down from Yorktown yesterday, and proceeded to Washington by the evening boat. Not a few have thought it a little singular that this experienced officer has been not one side at a time when his country needs the services of all, especially the most active and capable of her Generals. Walls Gen. Keyes' command is respectable, and the field in which he has been left of no inconsiderable importance, yet were his force increased he could, and if not restrained by orders, would play a very important part in the present game for Richmond.

It is to be presumed that the Government knows what it is about, however some may be disposed to contend that certain things argue the contrary. Nevertheless, one may be permitted, without pretense to superior sagacity, to have the opinion that the true play, as the men on the board now stand, (that is, if Richmond is the prize,) is to launch a force up the Peninsula. Twenty thousand men started up the James, handled energetically and skillfully, if the force did not in four days knock at the gates of Richmond, would, on the principle of counter irritation, (as President Lincoln would say,) have the effect to withdraw a large force, probably not much less than twice its numbers, from the main rebel army confronting McClellan. Two men assailing one, so that he can give but one hand to either, certainly place him at a disadvantage. There are Generals, and, I believe, among them as good as we have, who contend that the Peninsula, or James River route, is the only one by which Richmond can be reached. It has the advantage of rendering the joint efforts of the army and navy practicable. None other has.

Certain things do seem a little strange, and not the least strange of them all is the fact, that while the rebels have massed almost their entire force, and placed all their hopes on its ability to maintain itself—literally put all their eggs into one basket—the strangest thing is, that we, by massing the Federal force, do not overpower the enemy, and crush his eggs, instead of scattering our force, dividing it into numerous small armies, for special purposes or no purpose at all. Whenever we have been beaten, there has been one story,—the rebels had the most men. We have lost, nobody knows how many battles, from this cause. Last Spring the rebels abandoned sundry points which they had been holding at the expense of dividing their force, and consolidated it in one grand army for the defense of Richmond, the holding or taking of which virtually became some time ago the fate of the rebellion.

With that army they have beaten us every time, and, doubtless, feel themselves able to do so again. What do we do? Confessedly we have scattered over the country at the present time twice as many men as the rebel army under Lee numbers, or can number, for the defence of Richmond. Can it be doubted that our force collected, and used with ordinary skill, it would form a grand army that could march over the rebel army and "on Richmond?" and can it be questioned what would be the effect of such an event, or the wisdom of such a policy?

Would 30,000 men, well clothed, drilled and officered, quite as well as a large proportion of his present army, be a valuable reinforcement to Gen. McClellan at the present time? At least as many as 30,000 are now encamped—the Secretary of War and Gen. Halleck know where—where one-fifth as many would do just as well—where there are not 5,000 rebels within twenty-five miles, and they scared and on the defensive. Why are these troops thrown away—put to building Winter quarters, kept from active service, when they might improve the grand army in Virginia, or, better still, constitute the bulk of a sufficient force for the Peninsular campaign just spoken of.

If Gen. McClellan fails because of the superior force of the enemy—if we are to see another Chickahominy chapter because of not enough men, the country will vindicate him there is not enough men, the country will vindicate and there are now within the scope of a few miles 30,000 troops engaged in nothing more valuable than building Winter quarters, while as many more are being sent on an expedition two thousand miles distant. What Napoleon had, whatever brilliant the genius of Gen. McClellan may be, the reflection will be no more by a great deal than twice which Richmond taken, the grand rebel army beaten, there would be little question for the Winter quarters.

With the disorganization of the force to be commanded by Gen. Banks, with the idea here referred to, and the whole marching on Richmond by the Peninsula route, while McClellan's army presses down on the route by which it is already so well advanced, doubt any one doubt the result? And, I ask, how can our troops be used to better advantage?

When so much may be done, why should Gen. Keyes be kept at Yorktown, his force idly on the defensive, while a much larger force, within call, is employed to even less purpose? Good, some entered a plea in behalf of consolidating these forces under the General, to cooperate with Gen. McClellan in giving the final blow to the rebellion in the capture of Richmond. RODERICK.

Abatement of the Yellow Fever—Bilious Fevers and Dysentery Prevailing—Speculations as to the Next Commander of the Department, &c.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

Port Royal, S. C., Wednesday, Nov. 5, 1862.

The United States steamer Rhode Island stops here on her way Northward, and I take advantage of the few moments before the closing of the mails to write a few lines—indeed there is not sufficient occurring here at present to form the substance of a long letter.

The weather here since my last has been very favorable to health. Only one or two more cases of yellow fever have made their appearance. One fears on that score it has abated, and we all breathe freer, as having narrowly escaped a very dreadful epidemic. Although Yellow Jack has shrunk before the vigorous blasts of a freezing north and northeasterly wind, still bilious and congestive fevers are common, and with regiments placed in particularly unhealthy localities the cases are numerous. The Seventy-sixth and Ninety-seventh Pennsylvania Regiments have both suffered severely, the Ninety-seventh having over 200 on the sick list from fever and dysentery.

This strange visitation of an epidemic has made a wonderful change, in the short space of a week—a change so sudden and so complete that it is scarcely realized. The sudden removal of Gen. Mitchell, of Col. Brown, of Capt. Wainwright, of Capt. Williams, and several others, all prominent officers, has changed the course of events here materially. Speculation is rife as to who will be our next commander. Many names are mentioned, but none more frequently, I have noticed, than that of Maj.-Gen. Wright. Gen. Wright was here with Gen. Sherman, and he seems to have then won the confidence and love of all the soldiery here; so much so that Wright's name is almost sure to be the one mentioned when asked whom they would like to see in command here. It is to be hoped that the Government will send an energetic and capable man here—one who will accomplish something. Evidently this and other places along the coast, but more especially this place, will be the scene of active operations during the Winter, and while the Army of the Potomac remains inactive in Winter quarters.

The rebels had a healthy dread of Mitchell, as I manifested in the late Southern papers received, wherein the people of Savannah and Charleston are exhorted, in the most strenuous terms, to make every preparation for defence, as they must expect soon an attack from Mitchell, who will not remain long inactive. Gen. Brannan, at present temporarily in command of the post, issues the following General Order, as a mark of respect to the memory of Gen. Mitchell and the other officers who were, with him, victims to the fatal fever.

I am happy to be able to state that Gen. Mitchell's two sons, and Capt. J. J. Elwell, Quartermaster at this post, who have been suffering from the fever, are now reported out of danger, and near recovery.

Headquarters Department of the South, Hilton Head, Port Royal, S. C., Nov. 3, 1862.

General Orders No. 80.—It is the painful duty of the Commanding General to announce to the Tenth Army Corps, the decease of their late companions in arms:

Col. Nathaniel W. Brown, Third Regiment Rhode Island Artillery, (Chief of Artillery,) on the 30th of October, 1862.

Capt. L. A. Warfield, Commissary of Subsistence, (Depot Commissary, Port Royal,) on the 29th of October, 1862.

Capt. J. C. Williams, A. D. C., (Staff of the late Major-Gen. Mitchell,) on the 29th of October, 1862.

Who have fallen victims to the epidemic prevailing amongst us.

Col. Brown, since his command of the Third Rhode Island Artillery, had, by his military ability and excellent discipline, brought that regiment to a state of efficiency, rendering it equal, perhaps, to any in the corps.

Capt. L. A. Warfield was a faithful and efficient staff officer, and his great business capacity rendered him peculiarly fitted for the position he held with such credit to himself, and service to the Government.

Capt. J. C. Williams, A. D. C., served as Lieutenant and Aid-de-Camp on the Staff of Gen. Mitchell, during his entire campaign in the West, and though but quite a young man, had already distinguished himself as a gallant and efficient officer, and was much beloved by his companions for his many good qualities of heart and mind.

In the death of these officers the Government loses three faithful and devoted servants, the army some of its most efficient staff officers; and while we who are left mourn the death of those who in life were our esteemed companions, let us look back on their many excellent qualities, and hope that in our loss they have gained. BATTLE OF WILLIAMSBURGH.

Another Letter from Gen. Kearny Concerning Gen. McClellan.

From Wilkes' Spirit of the Times.

W Annapolis, Md., Nov. 9, 1862.

To the Editor of the Spirit of the Times:

The elections are over, and the tender-footed can now have no possible compunctions in reference to the so-called attacks on Gen. McClellan. I therefore send you a long letter from Maj.-Gen. Kearny, under date of May 15, 1862, in advance of those already published, which were detained for punctuation, to fully appear on its face.

It is a blistering review of the battle of Williamsburgh in general, and of Gen. McClellan in particular. Its telling truth and uncontrovertible logic and facts speak trumpet-tongued to the nation, "the impostor," foolishly, vain, ill generalship, "weakness and unreliability" of the Commander-in-Chief of the Army of the Potomac; and must prove a decidedly "wet blanket" to the favorite assertions and excuses, such as "Abolition forgery," "unwarrantable exposure of private correspondence," "galvanic, polished, after-dinner letter," &c., &c., with which certain sharp critics have heretofore amused themselves and the public.

I am at a loss to know, precisely, what new dodge the worshippers of the Brazen Idol will invent to break the force and effect of a condemnation so collieric, scathing and terrible, from a military sentiment so thoroughly independent, peculiar, capable and accomplished.

In the glare of the truth thus revealed, how "viale, flat and unprofitable," the low-bred, vulgar abuse of Fitz Halstead, for his esteemed, wanton disregard of the wishes and memory of his dear friend, favorite hero, and military idol, the brave Kearny.

I can only rejoice that the General thought proper to place in my keeping that record which will enable me, in spite of threats, intimidations and revilings, to vindicate his great name and fame, and at the same time expose, from a high military standpoint, the so-vaunted "skill and generalship" of whom, as an officer and gentleman, he evidently entertained an opinion so unfavorable and contemptible.

Your obedient servant, O. S. HALSTEAD, JR.

Headquarters Third Division, Heintzelman's Corps, Cumberland Landing, Va., May 15, 1862.

Dear Sir: I am sorry to find that, very far from military chiefs being immaculate, that their subordinates, relying on their straight-forward conduct and truthfulness, might disregard political influence as extraneous and unnecessary, or, already have been outwaged (and I say so as representing my Division) by the intrigues of the General-Commanding this army, that I now appeal to you and my friends for protection against imposture.

Gen. McClellan is the first commander in history, who has either dared, or been so anticipated as to ignore those under him, who have not only fought a good fight, but even saved his army, himself and his reputation. And here, precisely, is the point. From a want of frankness and reliance in his native superiority, he fears to admit the services of others (my division in particular) lest he thereby condemns himself for a want of generalship, which gave rise to the dangerous crisis. So a great and successful battle, where the unprecedented number of 2,000 have fallen, is passed over by him in silence, while the day after that fearful fight he forestalls the glory of the victors by vamping up, in a doubtful official telegram, a mere flurry of a skirmish, where Hancock, (a charging officer and gentleman,) with preponderating numbers, drives, for an instant, a paltry few of the enemy, with a sillance of a loss, which bespeaks the illiteracy of the transaction.

This move of Hancock's, based on information that the enemy had abandoned their minor defences opposed to our right, to concentrate their forces on our left, was gotten up at 4½ P. M., expressly to relieve from pressure the severe fight of the Third Corps, enacted by Hooker from 7 A. M. until my Division, at near 3 P. M., entered under fire and took the place of his exhausted remnants, demoralized by fatigue, abandonment and want of cartridges. The fire, that lasted from about 4½, for some twenty minutes, and which then ceased, was most distinctly without result, for it was not followed up by any advance; and left me, used to the fields of battle in Europe, as in Mexico, with the full belief that an attempted sneak had been given up, and that I must alone look to myself for my own means of success. For I well knew that, besides the repeated messengers that had been detached to the right, by Gen. Hooker and Heintzelman, that all there must be aware of our severe fight, from our cannon and musketry, which still rolled with the full tide of battle. This fire, tantamount to that of a half brigade, which I allude to, from about 4½ to 5 P. M., was the only one that took place within three miles of my position after my arrival, at 2½ P. M.—for I was ever constantly for its advance on the plain, in the midst of the heavy abattis. Yet Gen. McClellan vaunts the one and assumes to ignore the other. The engagement where a similar loss in the army of the Allies constituted the great battle of the Alma, an engagement where my few (5) weak regiments suffered more (some 450 killed and wounded) than the 12,000 men of a French division, when, in 1859, it won for its General a world-wide fame as the victor of Montebello.

But when Gen. McClellan passes over, as if in ignorance, an engagement of such great proportions, it proves, beyond the blackness of the deed, which breaks down by its iniquitous injustice the spirits of his entire soldiery, that it has been the result of a malignant design of covering up from the scrutiny of the American public, a weakness of his own, a flaw in his generalship which, he well knows, if once made patent to our people, would bring him down from his accidental superiority lower than the world ever dreamed of, when exercising retribution toward McDowell for the disasters of Bull Run.

This action of Gen. McClellan has but one parallel in history, his incarcerating Scott, one of the oldest men of the army, on the plea that it was done on the pressure of the Abolitionists, when it, in reality, was to damn past being listened to, one whom he knew, if questioned by a military committee, would not avoid bringing to light the incapacity (and subsequent contrivances to smother it) which had exposed Col. Baker, and then left him, helpless, doomed and unsupported, at the battle of Ball's Bluff.

There is a secret in this matter, and although patriotism, on the eve of an expected action, may prevent me from publishing to the world the weakness of the man, to whom we confide our Union destinies, it does not preclude me from vindicating for myself and my command a recognition of our service and exposure, (no officer has ever exposed himself as I did, for the crisis demanded it,) and unburthen myself to friends.

As Scott has been militarily killed under a false pretence, so the secret of McClellan's sending an official bulletin on the 6th inst., after entering Williamsburgh, in which he ignores all but Hancock, and is perfectly silent as to us, and our battle of serious war (although perfectly instructed by Col. Swayne, his A. D. C., whom he had sent on the night of the 5th to me and Heintzelman for information) is this that he might obtain for Gen. Hancock an important character in the crisis of the 5th, the first prestige of its capability of fighting (which invariably petty dissiers and long inaction had induced many to mistrust,) with which, with the eagerness of the whole North, it was ready to greet the first victor in the Army of the Potomac. And thus kill the military success before the country, of the real persons, so entitled, from the fact of the public being satiated by the first news—more serious than this, not only, taking from those who merit the high sentiment of first passage, but more particularly divert the minds of the country that that the culpable fact was, that he (McClellan) had allowed Hooker's single Division to fight unsupported from morning until my arrival, near 3 P. M., and from the fact that his "communications," from this being the direct and nearest road from Williamsburgh to Yorktown, were thus put in jeopardy; and that had a panic, or even a defeat, resulted here, that all his army confusedly huddled together, with an impassable, obstructed, single defile in his rear, where trains and artillery pieces were helplessly jammed together, and stalled, must have been victims worse than at Bull Run. The case would have been irretrievable.

In vain would he plead that he disgraced Sumner by sending him back to Yorktown, from dissatisfaction at his not having extricated Hancock, after his pseudo-victory, and for sending way to the rear for me, the last troops in the far defiles, to support Hooker, overpressed in the front. For it was not for Gen. Sumner, commander of a defined command, to substitute himself for McClellan, the Chief. In vain would he plead that Heintzelman should have proved a genius, and improvised connoissance of obstructions the worthy old General has never pretended but to do his duty in his sphere; and the General-in-Chief is head of all to furnish plans, and to expressly bind Heintzelman the energy of all, which was impossible, as he was not there.

In vain will he impute to Gen. Hooker the committing himself to a general fight involving the whole army, when a few regiments would have sufficed to
